RAIDER DESTROYS TWO MORE SHIPS, BOTH NEUTRALS

Norwegian Steamers Sunk on Monday 100 Miles at Sea from Cape Charles.

ONE FELL INTO A TRAP

COPPER CARGO WAS LOOTED

News of the sinking of two Norwegian steamships by a German submarine late on Monday afternoon about 100 miles east of Cape Charles was brought here yesterday by the sixty-eight officers and men comprising the crews, who arrived on the Norwegian steamship Brosund. The vessels were the Vindeggen and the Henrik Lund.

According to the stories told by survivors on their arrival here the Vindeggen, the first vessel overhauled, encountered the raiding U-boat early on Monday morning. The Vindeggen was bound from South America to New York with a cargo of copper. This copper was a rich find for the U-boat commander, who, after overhauling the freighter, spent most of Monday in shifting eighty tons of ingots to the submarine. The crew of the Vindeggen had to unload the copper from the mainhold and pass the ingots to the German seamen, who used the steamship's lifeboats to carry the metal to their own vessel.

Ship Stumbles Into Trap.

The other steamship, the Henrik Lund, did not come along until the work of transferring the copper had been nearly completed, and, observing the Vindeggen apparently stopped, her Captain steamed up close to see if he could lend any aid. The U-boat in the meantime was hidden from the officers on the bridge of the Henrik Lund by the Vindeggen, which was between them.

The commander of the submarine, after the Henrik Lund had come close enough, emerged from the cover of the Vindeggen and, quickly approaching the Henrik Lund, ordered the Captain to get ready to leave the ship with his crew at once. An officer went on board with three German sailors, and took three sacks of sugar from the storeroom, which were transferred to the U-boat. He also took the ship's papers and articles from the cabin. After the crew had got away from the Henrik Lund she was sunk with bombs.

By this time the transferring of the copper from the Vindeggen had been completed, and the crew were ordered to leave the vessel, which was sunk with bombs, like the other Norwegian steamship.

When the Brosund arrived at Quarantine yesterday, Captain A. Kaltenborn of the Henrik Lund and Captain Hansen of the Vindeggen went ashore in a patrol boat and landed at the Battery. In the report made to Norwegian Consul Ravn at 17 State Street, Captain Hansen said that he was well to the eastward of Cape Charles early on Monday morning, when the U-boat was sighted right ahead and ordered him to stop. After an officer from the U-boat had examined the ship's papers and discovered that her cargo consisted chiefly of copper, he returned to his vessel to have a consultation. Shortly afterward the German officer, who spoke good English, returned and told the Captain that he wanted about eighty tons of the ingots in the hold of the Vindeggen unloaded into boats and transferred to the submarine. It would have to be done quickly, the officer explained, and he instructed the Captain to order the crew of the steamship at once to assist in the work.

Transferred Copper in Boats.

The U-boat came close up to the Vindeggen and two of the largest boats were lowered from the davits, to be used as lighters. A sharp lookout was kept aloft at the masthead of the Vindeggen by two German sailors to see that no patrol boat or destroyer hove in sight without the commander of their craft being warned in time to get away.

The Captain of the Henrik Lund said that after the two steamships had been sunk late on Monday the U-boat took the two lifeboats in tow and steered in a northerly direction for some time until the Brosund was sighted bound from Oporto for New York. This vessel stopped and picked up the crews. Both Captains told the Consul that the submarine made no attempt to find out what steamship it was that had appeared on the horizon, but went away a short distance. Then she submerged.

Prussian Vote Bill Pushed; Party Split Over Issues

AMSTERDAM, June 12.—The lower house of the Prussian Diet has adopted the fourth reading of the Suffrage bill, including provision for proportional representation of the mixed language districts of the eastern provinces, according to advices received here from Berlin.

The House also passed bills settling the composition of the upper house and providing for a revision of the Constitution. The latter bill included a proposal of the majority parties by which revision of the Constitution can only be decided by a three-fourths majority. The Progressives, Poles and Social Democrats voted against the bills.

As a result of a split in the National Liberal Party on the suffrage issue, Alfred Lohmann, Chairman of that party in the Diet, will resign.

WILSON TO WATCH ALL WAR WORK

ASKS FOR SPECIAL BUREAU

Requests Baruch to Provide an Agency for Gathering the Information.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—President Wilson is preparing to keep in close personal touch with American production for the war by having a comprehensive survey of progress laid before him at regular intervals.

To this end he has written to Chairman Baruch of the War Industries Board asking that a bureau be created under the board to keep a close check on the progress of all war work, including coal and steel production, transportation, and the manufacture of war materials.

The proposal to create such a bureau was disclosed today by Representative Sherley of Kentucky, Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, in a speech on the Sundry Civil Appropriation bill. Mr. Sherley made no mention of the President's letter, but it was learned that Mr. Wilson had taken the matter up with Mr. Baruch and that a plan for surveys every month or two was being worked out.

In some quarters it was suggested that the President might decide that it would be more feasible for each warmaking agency to conduct its own investigation and submit to him its reports at stated periods. Under this plan the President probably would refer the surveys to the War Industries Board for recommendations to meet any difficulties or failures that might have arisen during the period under review.

House members displayed much interest in what Mr. Sherley said on the subject. He did not go into detail concerning the workings of the new bureau, but said that it soon would be in operation.

"What I am anxious about," said Mr. Sherley, "is that the President shall obtain in usable form the most accurate information possible of what is happening daily in the departments. I say it simply because I believe that under our form of government, and the present method of prosecuting this war, there alone can come the information for successful use. That is said without regard to personalities or parties."

Representative Madden of Illinois suggested that Congress should receive similar reports. To this Mr. Sherley objected, saying that the information ought to be confidential, and for the use of the President only.

"Assuming that this power ought to be put in Mr. Baruch's board," said Mr. Sherley, "and I say that because of the power already vested in that board, it ought to be possible with the right sort of organization and power to gather from each of the departments daily or weekly reports, as to production, and as to other important factors, and in obtaining that information exercise a judgment independent of that of the department itself, as to whether the statistics tell the real story or not.

"When a statement is made by a head of a particular department that things in his bureau are running well, a test could be made if need be, of the accuracy of his judgment. Some other man looking at it from an outside view might have a different opinion. In the last analysis, unless the President can get that sort of information in a sense disassociated from the men who are responsible for the work to which the information relates, he will be dependent upon the judgment of men whose work may be properly the subject of criticism."

PREMIER HEARTENS PARIS.

Tells Senate of French Resources and Gives Details of American Aid.

PARIS, June 12.—A reassuring impression has been produced by a statement given in the Senate by Premier Clemenceau on the situation at the front. He said that decisive results had been obtained at certain points with minimum forces and minimum losses, while the enemy losses had been enormous. He laid stress on the resources of the French Army which at certain times had crushed the German offensive.

WOULD CONTROL SUPPLIES

MANUFACTURERS TO UNITE

WASHINGTON, June 12.—Pooling of all economic resources of America and the nations allied against the Central Powers was a step nearer today after the weekly meeting of the President's War Cabinet.

One of the moves planned in the project for welding into a vast mobile machine the entire economic power of the United States and the Allies behind the military forces is the creation of a Munitions Council with headquarters at one of the Entente capitals.

This phase of the question, which has been under consideration by the War Industries Board for some months, was laid before President Wilson at today's session.

Under a tentative plan outlined, the Munitions Council would be divided into two parts, food and war material. On the former would sit representatives of the Food Ministries of the Allies and a representative of Food Administrator Hoover. On the latter, allied munitions heads would sit with a representative of the War Industries Board.

The control, purchase and distribution of food, raw material, and finished products needed by the Allies would be centred in the Munitions Council.

Any question as to the needs of the various allies, their armies, and those of the United States would come before the council. Where one ally's requirements, either for food or material, were more pressing than another's, steps would be taken to meet that need first. Orders for material would be allocated or reallocated in conformity with varying needs and the ability of plants in the allied nations to deliver.

Every industry, both in Europe and the United States, would be the object of special study with regard to its ability to turn out material needed, and duplication of manufacture would be prevented.

While the plan outlined is now tentative, such progress has been made that Assistant Secretary Stettinius, Food Administrator Hoover, and other officials of the war-making agencies are arranging to go to Europe within a few weeks to make preparations for setting up the organization.

Aside from the necessity of co-ordinating the industrial efforts of all the co-belligerents and preventing duplication of output, it was pointed out today that the situation at the battlefront made some sort of pooling scheme essential. The frequent shifting of troops from one sector to another necessitates the transfer of their equipment, guns, munitions, food supplies, and other impediments, weighing thousands of tons. A pooling arrangement would make it unnecessary to follow a military unit with long trains of freight.

MANUFACTURERS' BIG PLANS.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., June 12.—Plans were set in motion here today for a great federation of the industries of the United States, embracing 300,000 large and small plants, with a combined capitalization running into tens of billions of dollars and employing more than 10,000,000 workers, to fight Germany behind the lines and safeguard the interests of big business in the taxation problems connected therewith and the great trade and tariff problems to follow the war.

The fundamental details were agreed upon by manufacturers of Pennsylvania, New York, Delaware, Connecticut, Massachusetts, and New Jersey in a war convention at the Hotel Traymore. The gathering, which is recognized by the United States Government as well as the foreign Governments, was arranged by the Manufacturers' Council of the State of New Jersey. Upward of 30,000 plants, approximately a tenth of all those upon which the Government depends for the supplies, were represented. The output of the industries represented by the six States is said to be approximately a third of the industrial production of the nation.

"Give us such an organization, linking the manufacturers of this great country into one great federation, and

Foch Shares Confidence of Veterans in Victory

LONDON, June 12, (via Ottawa.)—An association of former British soldiers and sailors, known as "Comrades of the Great War," sent this message to General Foch:

"We have perfect faith that on the scene of your historic victory of 1914, in which many of us were privileged to share, you and your gallant men will again stem the tide of invasion and hurl the hated invaders from the sacred soil of France."

General Foch replied: "I share entirely your confidence."

OUR GUNS ACTIVE IN AID OF FRENCH

CANTIGNY RAIDS REPULSED

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN PICARDY, June 11, (Associated Press.)—American artillery aided the French in their counterattack against the Germans southwest and south of Montdidier today by directing a harassing fire against the enemy. Otherwise the American troops have not been engaged in the present battle. The Americans in the sector west of Montdidier, however, are ready to assist in the fighting at the first opportunity.

The Germans made two minor raids against the American lines at Cantigny on Monday night and were repulsed each time. One raiding party, which numbered forty, was routed by the revolver fire of the Americans.

On the right of the American sector German aviators have been busy. One enemy flying machine, bearing a French insignia as a disguise, flew over the American line at a height of 500 meters and attacked with bombs and machine gun fire American soldiers on the march. The Americans took cover and there were no casualties.

Reports that the Germans have been using French signs on their airplanes have been numerous during the last fortnight.

Our Thrust Baffling Germans.

LONDON, June 12.—"The Germans are taking seriously the American thrust at the apex of their line in the Clignon Valley, (northwest of Château-Thierry,) and thus far have used five divisions in attempting to counter it, but entirely without success," Reuter's correspondent at French Headquarters telegraphs under Tuesday's date. Two fresh divisions were thrown at the American centre at Bouresches this morning in a fruitless attempt to recapture the village.

"Trusting to the deep woods northeast of the village and the twisted spur of a hill to conceal them, the leading divisions advanced in mass formation. They, however, were observed from the Bois de Balleau and were brought under a destructive hail of shrapnel before they could deploy. The fire was so severe that the attack was disorganized and no progress could be made for some time.

"When the Germans did succeed in penetrating the defenses they were met with such enthusiasm in cold steel that their only choice was death or surrender.

"In the capture of the wood to the northwest of Bouresches the Americans had to deal with machine-gun nests—a game at which they are becoming expert. Gun after gun was captured and turned upon its late possessors and the advance never was materially delayed.

"Fierce fighting continued when the fringe of the wood was reached, the Germans being afraid of the open slopes behind them and over which their retreat had to be conducted. When at last they broke from the cover of the wood they came under a tempest of bullets. Surrender being impossible, they turned and ran, but very few reached ground where they could find refuge."

Prisoners Taken in Picardy.

WASHINGTON, June 12. — General Pershing's communiqué tonight said there was nothing to report aside from continued artillery activity in the Woevre and the taking of prisoners by American patrols in Picardy. The statement follows:

Aside from continued artillery firing in the Woevre and the taking of prisoners by our patrols in Picardy, there is nothing to report.

MOWING DOWN MEN IN GRAY

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, June 12, (Afternoon.)—The French lines hold all the way round from the important position of Mery Plateau by the hamlets of St. Maur and Antheuil to Marest and Chevincourt. Time after time, last night and this morning, the gray-coated masses of General von Hutier came on only to be mowed down by waves of fire from the 75s and machine guns, and their remnants dispersed with bayonet and grenade.

Yesterday's French counterattacks met great bodies of the enemy prepared to force another advance. Four divisions were found to be ranged in a space of two miles. Hence the frightful intensity of the combat and the abnormal slaughter.

The French tanks did very good service, and fleets of airplanes, British as well as French, swept down upon the battlefield before and behind our infantry, dropping bombs and raining down volleys of cartridges wherever a group of enemy soldiers was seen. The numerical inferiority of the French was thus made good.

The block of wooded hills was very difficult to defend, even if the enemy had got no further than Mareuil. The woods prevented long views and open fields of fire; the deep ravines invited infiltrations; the Oise Valley at the back left supply and relief columns open to the German guns, and the Matz Valley, on the west, was the plain path of envelopment. These are the reasons why this corner was not held longer.

Among the wheat and beet fields of the gently rolling plateau further west, on the other hand, the defense had more advantage. There are folds of ground enough to hide its batteries and reserves, but in every direction there are open lines of fire, room for manoeuvre and numerous railroads. Striking northeast from the Estrees Railway, the French threaten the German centre.

To continue the southward march, even if it were possible, before this pressure on the west had been disposed of would be reckless. Hutier has met his match.

Think Outlook Better.

June 12, (Morning.)—Faces that wore a serious expression yesterday morning are decidedly cheerful today. The battle has, in fact, taken a better turn. It is a very dreadful struggle; no Frenchman can forget that fact, and in the fever of weighing and measuring results more distant observers should not for a moment overlook what they mean in flesh and blood. That being said, we may join in the satisfaction of our allies that on its third day the German onset has suffered a distinct check.

Following the front from west to east, the first thing to note is the series of French counterattacks on the left, carried to a considerable measure of success by skill in the direction and high spirit and fortitude in the ranks.

At 11 A. M. yesterday a move-

Germany Is Greatly Worried Over Big Losses; Slaughter in Present Drive Admitted to be Terrific

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, June 12.—"Our losses in the last offensive are simply terrific. Every one must go into the front lines now, and protection is of no avail. Our sacrifices are dreadful. When will this war end?"

Thus a recent letter from a patriotic German began. There is now no doubt that the German people are much perturbed over their recent losses on the western front. There is also an effort afoot to convince the people that the U-boats will prevent the further transportation of American troops, and the German press is endeavoring to connect the spectacular appearance of the U-boats off the American coast with the offensive and to pretend that it is the final coup to the Soissons drive.

The Deutsche Tageszeitung says the main fault of the Allies is that everything is done too late, as in the case of the transportation of American troops, "which must now be suspended owing to our U-boats. This action of our submarines is directly connected with events on the west front, and is the logical completion of the land operations. That the enemy console themselves with ridiculous assertions is not surprising. They do not change the situation."

The Weser Zeitung says France's appeal to Wilson proves that the French have more confidence in the American Army than in Foch's. The paper points out that the Soissons offensive closed with a surprising event:

"The German U-boats threw bombs at the very doors of the New World. * * * For the first time the United States feels the unlimited possibilities of war painfully near."

The paper points out that it is a commencement and a warning, even if it at first was only a surprise.

The paper adds that as long as everything went well with the delivery of munitions and arms the Yankees were undisturbed, but now that this trump is gone America is consoled by THE NEW YORK TIMES, which declares that the Germans could not have chosen a better way to stir up the war spirit in America.

The Weser Zeitung says that this same argument was used about the Zeppelins in England, and Wilson talks of unlimited force. The paper says that only the German sword has taught Germany's enemies modesty.

The whole German press has shown considerable satisfaction over the recent American airplane "scandal," and the Cologne Gazette speaks of "Wilson's dollar war." It says:

"This gigantic swindle must be a surprise, even in America, where it is expected that with every Government deal half goes into some one's pocket. 'To the victor belong the spoils.' Under the glorious sceptre of the true democracy and world humanitarianism of Mr. Wilson this time-honored phrase has no meaning except that the whole sum is put in the pocket."

EXPLOIT BY TORPEDO BOATS

Enemy Squadron Was Bound from Pola, Seeking Safer Refuge at Cattaro.

MILAN, June 12.—The famous motto of the American Admiral, Farragut, "Not iron ships, but iron hearts," was superbly illustrated in Captain Rizzo's daring and well rewarded attack with two small torpedo boats upon two Austrian dreadnoughts of the Viribus Unitis class, one which was sunk by two torpedoes, and the other severely damaged.

These 22,000-ton ships, each having a crew of nearly 1,000 men, were being removed in the middle of the night from Pola to what was regarded as a safer base at Cattaro, under the escort of ten destroyers.

The two small Italian submarines first spotted the enemy division off the Island of Gruiza, whence it made a bold dash for the high seas rather than risk the striking of possible mines amidst the tortuous canals of the Dalmatian Archipelago.

This is the deadliest blow inflicted on an enemy fleet in the Adriatic since the beginning of the war, and it was achieved without loss of any kind to the Italian assailants. It leaves Austria with only one of her most powerful battleships in seagoing condition, for a third unit of this type was wrecked recently in Pola Harbor in the raid so brilliantly carried out by Captain Mario Pellegrini.

Italy has thereby ably prepared the way toward effective naval support of her land forces on the Piave.

Captain Rizzo, who is only just turned 30 years, had already won the gold medal of merit for having blown up the Austrian battleship Wien at Trieste in September.

VENICE, June 11.—Formal announcement that one Austrian dreadnought was destroyed and a second one damaged in the attack made by Italian torpedo boats upon an Austrian naval division near the Dalmatian Islands at dawn on Monday, was made today by the Chief of Staff of the Navy. The

MASSED GERMANS SWEPT BY SHELLS

190,000 IN FIRST ATTACK

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY, June 12, Noon, (Associated Press.)—In a width of battlefront 3,000 yards in extent no fewer than four German divisions, (more than 50,000 men,) were preparing to hit a hard blow when the French yesterday launched a highly successful counterattack southeast of Mondidier. The density of the German troops was fatal for them, because the allied artillery, machine guns, riflemen, and aviators were able to aim at point-blank range into these masses of men. This concentrated fire did terrible execution.

The battle continued throughout the night and in the early hours this morning, when the Allies made a further advance to the east of Mery, which is a most important point, as it commands the valley.

Toward the centre the enemy launched several attacks today, but the line held firmly, although some enemy detachments succeeded in filtering into the Matz Valley through the wooded country.

Yard by yard the French fought while the Germans tried to push them back by sheer force of numbers. Eventually the enemy succeeded in gaining a little ground, but at fearful sacrifice.

South of the river Oise and also south of the Aisne the Germans showed much activity today, endeavoring to reduce the allied salient.

The spirit of the allied infantrymen when they went forward in their counterattack yesterday was very high, although they knew the enemy facing them was several times their number.

When the Germans were seen to be retiring, although still making a fierce fight in order to hold their gains made in the first days of the battle, the Allies dashed forward with, if possible, augmented ardor.

The advantage gained by Foch's troops yesterday was evene greater than at first reported. Besides carrying out remarkably successful counterattacks resulting in the restoration of some territory and the capture of many prisoners, they repulsed a very fierce German attack in the region of Béthancourt, Machemont, and Chevincourt.

The enemy, employing large forces, was able to obtain a footing in Mache-

HARD FIGHTING EVERYWHERE

ANTHEUIL FRONT HOLDING

WITHDRAWAL EAST OF OISE

PARIS, June 12.—The French troops have made further advances around Belloy and St. Maur, and have captured 400 additional prisoners, some cannon, and machine guns, according to the War Office announcement tonight. This is on the left of the Montdidier-Noyon battleground.

In the centre also around Antheuil the troops of Foch have been holding well.

On the right, however, the Germans, after extreme efforts, have succeeded in getting a foothold on the southern bank of the Matz River, occupying the village of Melicocq and adjoining heights.

The French troops have been withdrawn east of the Oise, along the line of Bailly, Tracy-le-Val, and Nampoel, under the protection of covering detachments, without the enemy being aware of the movement.

French troops have won further ground in the region east of Veuilly, (northwest of Château-Thierry,) where they have been fighting at the left of the United States marines and infantry. Montcourt has been occupied and the southern part of Bussiares.

German Pressure Still Heavy.

We made progress in the region of Belloy Wood and St. Maur and took 400 additional prisoners, as well as numerous cannon and machine guns. On the front of St. Maur-Anteuil there was no change.

On our right the Germans renewed their attacks along the Matz River. After several attempts, which cost them heavy losses, they succeeded in gaining a footing on the south bank in the village of Melicocq and on the heights of Croix Ricard.

East of the Oise our troops on Monday carried out a withdrawal on the line of Bailly, Tracy-le-Val, and west of Nampcoel under the protection of covering detachments, who masked our movement to the enemy. In the region of Naute-Braye we repulsed an enemy attack and took prisoners.

South of the Aisne desperate engagements, in which the fighting was hand to hand, took place between the river and the forest of Villers-Cotterets. Our troops offered spirited resistance to the attacks of the enemy who made slight progress on the plateau west of the villages of Dommiers and Cutry. All his efforts against Ambleny and St. Pierre Aigle failed.

North of the Marne our troops occupied Montcourt, the small woods north of Eloup, and the southern part of Busseares.

French Advance East of Mery.

The battle between Montdidier and the Oise continued without great change during the night. On our left all attempted attacks by the enemy against positions we had reconquered were broken.

The French troops have realized new progress east of Mery and the Genlis Wood. Violent German attacks have likewise been repulsed by the French on the Aronde front, at St. Maur, the Loge Farm, and Antheuil.

The French troops have withstood the shock of attacks and inflicted heavy losses upon the assailants while guarding their positions.

On the right the Germans, in despite of repeated efforts, have not been able to debouch south of the Matz. The French are holding that part of the field south of Chevincourt and Marest-sur-Matz.

According to new information from the battlefront, the French counterattack yesterday occurred while a powerful German attack was in preparation on the same front. French troops came in contact with heavy forces of the enemy and threw them into disorder.

Prisoners taken by one French division are found to belong to four different German divisions.

South of the Aisne the Germans attacked this morning between the river and the Villers-Cotterets Forest. Violent combats are going on on the front of Dommiers, Cutry, and south of Ambleny.

Berlin Reports Gains.

BERLIN, June 12, (via London.)—Announcement that the French had evacuated Carlepont Wood on the east bank of the Oise was made in the bulletin from General Headquarters today, which said the Germans were making advances in this area.

The bulletin reads:

There have been artillery duels of varying intensity. The infantry activity has been limited to reconnoitring engagements.

Army of the German Crown Prince—Yesterday the hard-fighting army of General von Hutier repulsed an expected counterattack for the recapture of a group of hills southwest of Noyon, which was carried out in strength by several French divisions. The enemy was thrown back on the whole of the front of the attack from Le Ployron to Antheuil [about ten miles] with the heaviest losses. His armored cars, which were brought into action in great numbers, are lying shot to pieces on the battlefield.

Between Mery and Belloy, where the enemy's assault was shattered by a counterattack, bitter fighting lasted until nightfall.

The west bank of the Oise, north of the point where the Matz runs into it, has been cleared of the enemy.

The number of prisoners brought in by the army has increased to more than 13,000.

The loss of the heights southwest of Noyon forced the enemy to evacuate his positions in Carlepont Wood, on the east bank of the Oise. In close pursuit, we followed the retreating enemy beyond Carlepont and Caisnes and, fighting our way forward, reached a line running north of Bailly, through Tracy-le-Val to Nampcel.

The night report is as follows:

There have been local engagements on the battlefields northwest of Noyon and south of the Aisne.

BRITISH RAID A SUCCESS.

French Also Score Near Locre—Hostile Artillery Fire West of Lens.

LONDON, June 12.—Successful raids by British and French on the northern part of the front are noted in today's official bulletins. A German attack on a British post north of Albert was beaten off last night. There have been intervals of hostile artillery fire to the west of Lens.

Tonight's report from Field Marshal Haig says:

An attack on one of our posts in Aveluy Wood last night was repulsed.

We captured a few prisoners in a successful raid at Boyelles.

KILLING GERMANS THE TASK.

That Sums Up Foch's Tactics in Meeting the Present Drive.

By WALTER DURANTY.

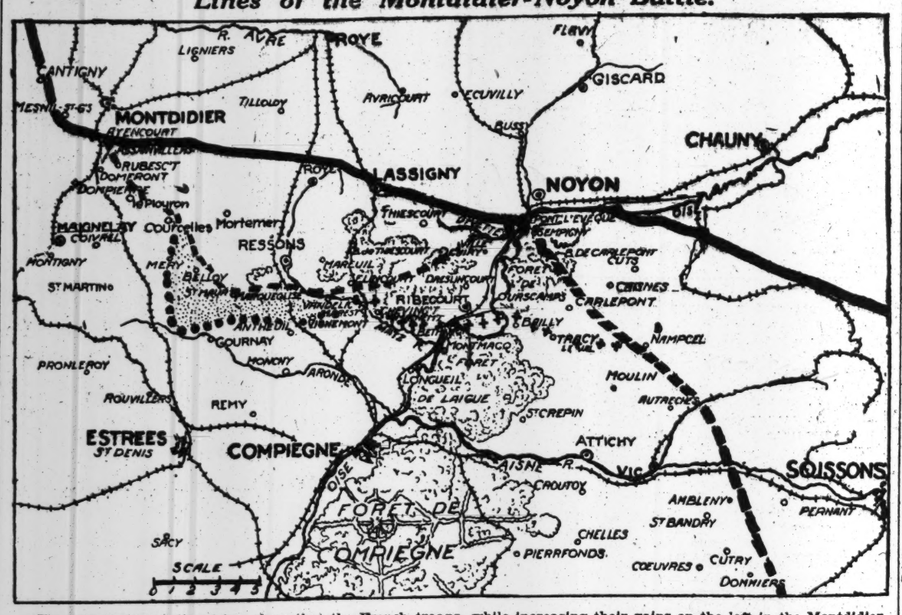
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, June 11.—In this morning's message [published in yesterday's TIMES] I insisted strongly on the enemy's losses. It is the essential factor of the whole battle. The allied tactics for the moment are summed up in the phrase, "Kill as many boches as possible," so that by forcing the enemy to use up new divisions to maintain his progress his reserves for subsequent operations may be diminished.

The latest information indicates that the Germans are finding Dreslincourt Massif too strong. They have devoted their whole attention to turning it from the south. They have succeeded, although the success has been counterbalanced by allied gains on the left wing, where a strong attack of colonial and black troops, supported by tanks, recovered the plateau dominating the line Mery-Belloy-Marqueglise-Vandelicourt.

Having thus secured the left flank by the advance to Ribécourt, the enemy will probably now direct his attack by a converging movement along the valleys of the Oise, Matz, and Aronde. Thrown back from the latter stream by the allied gains on the left, he is certain to return to the charge. In the meantime, the French resistance is desperate as ever, and stiffened by reserves. Every arm of air and land is employed with the supreme object of making the Germans pay for their advance as dearly as possible.

Lines of the Montdidier-Noyon Battle.



The latest official dispatches show that the French troops, while increasing their gains on the left in the Montdidier-Noyon area of the German offensive, especially in the Mery-Belloy region (these gains being represented by the stippled area) and holding their ground in the centre, around Autheuil, have been obliged by the Germans to withdraw their lines at the right, southwest of Noyon. The enemy has now gained a footing on the south bank of the Matz and has reached a line running north of Bailly through Tracy-le-Val to Nampcel. The new German front in this region is marked on the map by crosses. The shaded area is the territory recovered by the French.

West of Soissons, according to a French official report which was received after the preparation of the accompanying map, the Germans carried their line west of the villages of Dommiers and Cutry.

The War Situation

By THE MILITARY EXPERT OF THE NEW YORK TIMES.

It is reasonably clear now that the French have had to fall back on the east bank of the Oise, giving up the angle at Sempigny and retiring on a line as far south as the southern bank of the Matz River. The salient at Noyon has therefore, if this proves to be the case, disappeared. This, however, is far from being a serious matter with the French. That the positions along the eastern bank of the Oise between Noyon and Ribecourt were very formidable in defense is evident. The river itself forms a strong barrier, and to this was added the Forest d'Ourschamp which skirted the eastern bank between these points, in which forest the French from concealed positions could and did raise havoc with the attacking flank. But in spite of this retirement the French lines are still well located and are still able to withstand the shock of the German attack. As a matter of fact they have not been forced to give up all of these woods. The danger in the sharp angle at Sempigny can be eliminated by falling back half way through the forest without throwing the entire wood open to the German forces. The French retirement does not appear to have added anything to the general German advance. Although the battle continued all day yesterday without cessation, the progress of the Germans was truly insignificant, if, indeed, there was any advance at all.

This is clearly proved by the sudden switch in the German plan of attack as evidenced by the change in the front of activity. The German plan was, through use of the same tactical methods employed in previous attacks, to break through the French line along the line of the Matz valley and thus to cut in behind the woods of Thiescourt and lay open the entire flank of the French on the east bank of the Oise. There was one particular object in this. The terrain about the woods of Thiescourt is very unfavorable for attack by the direct route. It is filled with hills and valleys, possesses abundant observation posts and good artillery positions, and to take it by frontal attack would necessarily involve heavy losses. Nevertheless this is just what the Germans had to do. They accomplished their advance down the Matz valley after terrific fighting, but the French lines on the west as well as on the east held fast, reducing the front of advance to a sharp angle. As this again offered an opportunity for a French counterstroke, a frontal attack was made which penetrated to Antoval, thus flanking the east bank positions, as was intended.

But this part of the plan is relatively a minor one. In other words, it was tactical rather than strategic. The real plan was to avoid the forests of Laigue and of Compiègne. Through exactly the same process as that which enabled the Germans to clear the Forest d'Ourschamp the Germans hoped to clear the forests of Laigue and of Compiègne; that is, there was to be an advance down the Oise, sticking close to the western bank, flanking the French out of these forests as the advance continued.

But the French did not give ready acquiescence to this plan. They pinned the German forces down on the northern bank of the Matz and, while throwing them back here, counterattacked on the western part of the line. Defeated in this object, and defeated with paralyzing losses, the Germans have begun another offensive, this time a frontal attack against the northern part of the western side of the Marne salient. This salient is the trap, if trap there be, into which Foch's sudden retreat to the Marne drew the German attacking force. Now that they are so far south and in a sharp wedge which is vulnerable on both sides, the Germans must spread out westward, both that the old and the new battlefields may be joined and that the danger of their position may be removed. The German effort on the front between the Aisne and the northern part of the forest of Villers-Cotterets, while a frontal attack against positions which the Germans had hoped to flank, is nevertheless in itself a flanking operation aimed at the southern extremity of the forest of Compiègne. Between the forest of Villers-Cotterets and that of Compiègne there is a small gap or open space which forms an avenue through which both can be reached. Checked on the Matz, on the other side of the river, the Germans are now trying to cut in behind the French by breaking the line north of Villers-Cotterets. Success here would mean the accomplishment of the German object in this last attack. But this position has been attacked before, and each time it has successfully stood the test, and there is nothing in such news as has yet reached us to cause us to believe that it will not again beat off the attacks.

The best indication that the Germans are having a much more difficult time than heretofore is the size of the French counterefforts. These blows have been delivered with great strength in the very teeth of the German attacks, and have been twice successful. The first resulted in the recapture of Mery, while the second, made over a wide front, hurled the Germans back from the Aronde River and restored the original lines north of Belloy and the Gemlis Wood. It is positively reassuring to have this proof that the French are present in such strength, and that they not only feel sufficiently strong to hold the Germans in check, but to attack themselves. The result of these reactions is that the Germans, held fast on both flanks, are being forced either to halt their advance completely or to continue on an ever-narrowing front, while the French remain on both flanks at the very base of the advance in great strength. It is not a particularly pleasing alternative.

190,000 Germans in First Attack.

Details concerning the beginning of the battle between Montdidier and the Oise show that on Sunday morning fourteen German divisions (about 190,000 men) joined in the first onslaught. Of these, five chosen divisions were detailed to break through the centre of the French line. These included regiments of Guards and Jaegers.

All the units engaged had been brought to fullest strength, having been reinforced after the March and May offensives. Since the beginning of the battle other divisions have been thrown into the line.

The Allies, who had suspected that an attack was about to occur, were spread in deep formation, the first lines being just sufficiently manned to delay the enemy's rapid progress until the action developed, in the meantime falling back fighting to the real line of defense.

Owing to his great strength, the enemy succeeded in forcing his way through a depression forming the centre of the Allies' position, but the flanks held more firmly.

The German objectives for the first day were Tricot, Mery, and Belloy. The last two they managed to capture on Monday after terrific fighting, but their hold was but temporary, for the French, with wonderful dash, came back yesterday and forced them to retire, sorely punished.

The second day's objective was Compiègne, but the enemy's arrival there was prevented, and he is still some distance away.

It is the general impression that the battle will continue for some days, during which other slight fluctuations in the line may occur, but the evident results of this first dash are disappointing to the Germans, who, seeing themselves held here, may turn their attention elsewhere.

Heroic Band Wirelessed "Doomed."

The stand of a detachment of dismounted cavalry on the height of Le Piemont will be remembered as one of the most heroic episodes of the war. Surrounded Sunday morning at 4 o'clock they resisted until Monday noon against repeated and most ferocious enemy assaults. Every two hours they sent back a wireless message, which always read: "We're holding."

Finally, when the hour of noon was striking on Monday, one word came through: "Doomed."

French cannon and machine guns have reaped a heavy toll since Sunday. An entire division of the famous Jaegers was cut to pieces at Ressonsusur-Matz, while a Guards division lost a great proportion of its effectives. Other divisions, it is learned, suffered equally during the preparation for the attack and the advance to the narrow valleys, all the passes of which were dominated by the allied guns. Every prisoner taken seems horrorstricken at the slaughter of his comrades.

Military Cities Built in Year Are Glorious Achievement, Says a British Writer.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, June 11.—The Times special correspondent, in conclusion of the first authorized description of the work accomplished by the American forces since they landed in France, writes of visits he paid to several of the new American flying schools. He says:

"I am convinced that these American boys will rank among the best fliers in combat work at the front. On a recent Sunday morning at one of the flying centres I visited there were perhaps sixty machines in the air at once, some practicing in formations, some doing ordinary stunts, some advanced acrobatics, and others hard at combat work.

"At another point some distance away I was equally impressed with both the work in progress and the working plans of one of the extensive so-called 'air service production departments.' This important centre of activity, which is typical of several now in course of construction, covers a tract of land over six miles long by a mile and a half wide, where the construction, assembling, testing, and repair of American airplanes will soon be going ahead full tilt on a scale never before known. The work splits into four main divisions—transportation, production, construction, and supply.

Army Farms Started.

"Great stretches of woodland are being cleared; many lines of track are being laid; great workshops, storehouses, and camps are being built by huge forces of busy men; wells are being sunk; drainage systems are being installed. The camp farm is being seeded, including thirty acres of potatoes. A pig and poultry farm has been started, and while I was there a new camp band was rehearsing for its first performance.

"In an official parade the following morning a wiry little man in charge of this important branch of the air service treated the many thousands under him as if they were all members of his immediate family. He has a very human side, and this crops out in many phases of his great work. His 2,000 Chinese laborers—a small part of his total force—have a fine Chinese garden in their quarter with rustic bridges, quaint summerhouses, and flower beds of rare design and beauty. His company quarters all have their flower beds and special decorations."

Describing his visits to other spots, the correspondent writes:

"At one point I went through enormous locomotive assembling and repair works housed in a great modern factory building now nearing completion. It was built for the Americans under French supervision by a Spanish firm. There is a huge oil and petrol supply station, a 10,000-bed hospital, and a number of other highly important branches of a central organization which constitutes one of the real backbone sections of the service of supply.

Immense Supply Plants.

"At another point, I went over great railway yards, to see rows upon rows of steel structure warehouses which are being built to hold supplies for an army of 1,000,000 men for thirty days, an immense refrigerating plant, a gas plant, an oil storage plant, and countless other features, all on the same prodigious scale. Calm, quiet men are supervising it, all watching it grow before their eyes. When the telephones jingle—and they are never long in repose—there is no shouting, no excitement, just quiet, firm replies to the questions put.

"There is everywhere an air of suppressed energy rather than exuberance or bustle. It is orderly progress, firmly guided by strong minds, by capable men. America has put her best executives into this work, and they are rapidly making good, as events of the very near future are certain to prove.

"Further along the line I saw much the same evidence of orderliness combined with strength. In army bakeries, in the big central camouflage plant, at various advanced centres from which army supplies are rearranged for shifting to the various railroads and thence to the soldiers at the front, it all spells complete knowledge on the part of every principal engaged of what America set out to do when she entered this war and a full determination to see that job through to the finish. This foundation work is sound and thorough; so also will be the work of the Americans when they emerge in strength into the larger field of operations.

"If, as many believe, it is going to be necessary for the Americans to put an army of 3,000,000 into the field to enable the Allies to achieve a definite and conclusive military victory, then the quick development of the full American program is a matter of the highest importance to the whole allied cause.

"From every point of view the results of the first year's work may be set down as a glorious achievement, of which Americans have every right to be proud. The year's record is a monument to their zeal and their wonderful ability. It is a record which promises still greater things for the near future. It spells the beginning of the end, and points clearly to overwhelming victory for the Allies. It seems to me that the more the people of France, England, and the United States know about this American work in France, the better. If the enemy, failing in his effort to deliver a knockout blow by flinging against the allied lines the full force of his eastern armies released by the collapse of Russia, next turns his efforts to a concentrated peace offensive, as doubtless he will, then surely a clear knowledge of the nature and extent of the American achievement to date, of the American plans and, most of all, an understanding of the underlying American determination to go the whole distance and not to stop till the right kind of peace has been secured, will steel the hearts of the war-weary and wavering ones and silence the traitors and pacifists among us for good and all."

ment began from a little east of the railway line between Domfront and Waequemoulin. The infantry were supported by tanks, and along the whole line the Germans were swept back. A French contingent actually reached points which were within the German front. The French advance went well beyond Rubescourt and Le Fretoy, half way between Courcelles and Mortemer, and between Mery and Couvilly, beyond Belloy, and to the border of St. Maur.

Meanwhile the enemy had delivered a very powerful blow at the French centre and had driven a way, despite vigorous opposition, as far as the village of Antheuil, two miles south of the Matz. At 4 P. M. a further counterattack was therefore made from the French left centre, and the enemy advance was completely arrested. In these combats a certain amount of confusion was apparent in the German ranks, and the fact that 1,000 prisoners and some cannon were taken speaks eloquently. This was not the heaviest punishment. Eye-witnesses say that German corpses strew the battlefield in piles.

The enemy made an effort over into the French right centre with the aim of debouching by the Matz Valley to the Oise. Up to late last night the French had repulsed repeated assaults upon Chevincourt, while Machemont and Béthancourt had changed hands several times.

Enormous Losses to Offset Gains.

Three critical days of the offensive have then given the enemy at the cost of enormous losses a not very magnificent result. We now know that the program was to reach Compiègne on the second day. General von Hutier must be greatly disappointed.

The attack was begun with fourteen divisions, at full strength, in the line. They included at the centre divisions of the Prussian Guard and four other crack divisions. About twice as many divisions have now been thrown into this battle, ten already holding the sector and the rest being fresh reserves.

These figures may be measured by the fact that the total German forces in the west amount to 207 divisions, and that of these before the offensive only sixty-two were in the general reserve, the rest being engaged on the front. The more we consider in the light of material considerations like these what the German command essayed and what it has accomplished the more we shall appreciate the valor of the French armies and the qualities of their chiefs; and it is impossible to do justice to either without such reflection.

A certain anxiety is pardonable in a crisis before accurate information is available. Men read that, although there was no surprise, the Germans have beaten back our line over a broad front, and with childish inconsideration they ask why we can never have force enough at the right point. At the same time they read that a committee has been formed for organization and defense of the intrenched camp of Paris. Adding two and two, where there are only one and one, together, they easily make ten of it, and innocently set to work to purvey panic.

Let us by all means recognize the ability and strength as well as the unscrupulousness of the German command. Fortune, by the hand of the Bolsheviki, gave them a temporary superiority of forces. Wit and daring have enabled them to give effect to this advantage by a new method of attack. This being admitted, let us look fairly at the difficult position of our own command in this defensive period.

"Surprise" is not an absolute term, but a matter of a myriad degrees. To say absolutely that there was no surprise on Sunday morning would be absurd. An army which by superiority of numbers has the initiative must always have some advantage of surprise. There was reason to expect an attack, but of what dimensions?

It might have been only a demonstration to draw attention away while the real blow was delivered in the north. I am not in General Foch's confidence, but I imagine that his preoccupations take some such form as this. He has to safeguard not only a part, but the whole of the Allied line pending the day when America will have redressed the balance of forces. He has to hasten this day of our recovery of initiative by rigorous economy of the Allied troops.

Surprise cannot be wholly prevented, but patches of ground not of essential value can be safely lost provided a heavy price is extorted for them. It is a larger, freer form of the war of usury. The less ground lost the better, but the vital thing is to take toll, to wear out the enemy.

I do not return again and again to the statistics of German divisions for the fun of the thing, but because there, and not in the thrilling stories of the combat, lies the heart of the problem. Von Hutier had conceived a very pretty plan for the reduction of the Thiescourt-Dreslincourt hill corner and the turning movement by the Matz Valley. It seems to me that the French reply in these three days has been conceived and executed with remarkable shrewdness.

The advance down the Matz could not be at once stopped. What then? Consider the character of the battlefield. West and east of the Matz the central battle, which was not to regain ground, but destroy the invaders, was won. As I have said, it was inevitable that the loss of the Thiescourt hills should have results on the other side of the Oise.

The aim of the German command, if not already plain enough, was openly avowed this morning, when the east flank of the salient from Moulin-sous-Touvent to the Aisne, near Fontenoy, and its supports on the south of the Aisne from Ambleny, through Cutry to Dommiers, were the scene of a new development of the offensive. This wide attack is an admission of a check on the west of the Oise, and of the poor prospect for a march on Compiègne and Paris by the shortest road.

Heavier Fire On the Toul Sector.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, June 12, (Associated Press.)—Two American patrols engaged German patrols last night on the Toul sector, the Americans returning without losses. The German artillery fire on this front again was heavy during the night and early today and aerial activity increased.

Saving Millions in Coal

Millions of tons of coal may be saved each year through the development of the water power of our country. Central electric stations to supply areas 100 miles in radius are planned for certain regions. Further development of railroad electrification and power supply for industries along the Atlantic seaboard not only will save vast quantities of fuel but release labor and railroad equipment for other important purposes.

To effectively carry on our part in the war, the greatest progress must be made in developing our natural resources. In that progress adequate banking facilities are a highly important factor. The Citizens National Bank offers to merchants and manufacturers a banking service designed to meet the demands of these unusual times.

Mr. Johnson Calls Attention To The Noisy Typewriters

SIX men were gathered in the conference room. Mr. Stafford, the Vice-President, started to read some important specifications.

He got as far as the third sentence. Suddenly the staccato blows of the typewriters came piercing through the walls. The typists had returned from luncheon and the daily bombardment was again in full swing.

Stafford looked reproachfully at Mr. Johnson and Mr. Johnson rose in his own defence. He'd been advocating Noiseless Typewriters for three months and he welcomed this opportunity. He motioned Jones to open the door so that Stafford would get the full blast. Bang!

The vote was unanimous. Noiseless Typewriters were to be put in for a trial. What pleased Stafford particularly was the salesman's willingness to demonstrate the Noiseless right by his side while he was taking a long-distance call.

FRENCH FIGHTING BALKING GERMANS

FOE'S RESERVES DIMINISH

Thinks Attack in North Cannot Be Made While Pressure Toward Paris Keeps Up.

By MAJOR GEN. Sir FREDERICK MAURICE.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, June 12.—The fighting in this fourth episode of the German offensive campaign of 1918 has been very different in character from that which marked the opening phases of the other three.

The allied reserves were ready, and as a consequence the enemy has had to fight hard and endure proportionately much heavier losses for much smaller results, nor has he been able to hold all his gains.

If he was better prepared than the Allies with men to replace his casualties at the opening of his campaign his man-power resources are far from inexhaustible, and as he is looking for big and quick returns for his efforts the last thing he desires is a small gain at a high cost.

The German communiqué of Tuesday afternoon, referring to events up to Monday night, claims that von Hutier's attacks led to the intended results, and undoubtedly by that time the enemy had got further than seemed probable from the first reports. The opening day of the battle after hard fighting yielded the enemy results which, if incomplete, he appears to have thought sufficiently considerable to warrant him trying for more.

Had Reserves to Follow Up Attack.

As usual he had reserves ready to follow up his first success, and on Monday he threw in fresh troops and attacked along the whole front. On his right he gained possession of the important ridge which, running from Mery by Belloy toward Marquegliise, separates the valleys of the Matz and Aronde, and pressing southward he appears to have got close to the Montdidier-Estrées Railway and to have gained the valley of the Aronde, an advance at its greatest depth of some eight miles. In the centre he continued his movement down the Matz Valley to beyond Vandelicourt, thus menacing the retreat of the defenders of Thiescourt plateau.

Counterstroke That Told.

At the same time on the right he pressed forward along the plateau itself through Thiescourt Woods and hemmed in the French between the eastern edge of the high ground and the Oise. Our allies, menaced both in front and flank, and with a serious obstacle immediately in their rear, fell back across the river and abandoned the important plateau to the enemy.

These gains were serious, and, if maintained, would mean that the enemy had taken a big step toward clearing the angle between the Oise and the Aisne, and gaining possession of Compiègne.

The situation on Monday night was certainly an anxious one and justified the enemy's claims. On Tuesday, however, our French allies by a brilliant counterattack materially altered the situation. Advancing against the right flank of the enemy's attack, they recovered a great part of the ground which had been lost in this portion of the battlefield, recaptured the villages of Mery and Belloy, and, still more important, the ridge on which these villages stand, and drove the Germans out of the Aronde Valley.

A successful counterattack on this scale (apparently it was made on a front of about ten miles) must mean that the losses inflicted were severe, and that the enemy's arrangements for extending his first success are materially affected.

The Germans still remain in possession of the valuable Thiescourt plateau. They have apparently established themselves there since our allies thought it wise to fall back from the salient in which they were left on the other bank of the Oise and evacuate the Carlepont Woods.

So long, however, as the French maintain their hold on Belloy Ridge and on the high ground on the southern bank of the Matz near its junction with the Oise, as from the latest reports they appear to be doing, they should still be able to hold the Forest of Laigue and the plateau between the Oise and the Aisne, and to cover Compiègne.

It has been necessary to reinforce von Hutier heavily to enable him to get as far as he has, and some at least of these reinforcements must have come from the north.

With his steadily diminishing reserves, both in the form of fresh divisions to feed the battle line and of men to replace the losses, Hindenburg must be anxiously calculating whether he is strong enough to carry out two great offensives, one on the main British front and the other directed against Paris.

Prince Rupprecht in the north has not moved, and it is too early yet to say he will not do so, but it seems reasonably certain that the Germans have reached a position in which they find themselves unable to continue the pressure on Paris to the same extent as heretofore and at the same time carry out an attack on the British front on a scale which they appeared to contemplate a short time ago.

I do not imagine the drain on Prince Rupprecht's reserves has yet been serious and that he is not still capable of putting in a very heavy attack, but the pool of drafts to replace losses must be dwindling, and with it the power to keep up attacks on a grand scale.

Hindenburg Is Facing Problem.

One of the two German offensives must not be weakened for the benefit of the other. It is not yet possible to say what solution Hindenburg will find to this problem, but faced as he is with the urgent necessity of obtaining really decisive results during the present campaigning season, he can hardly be content with the return von Hutier has given him for the force employed and the losses incurred.

The enemy have now started an attack on the salient in which lies Compiègne. This attack must have been intended to be in combination with the von Hutier effort, and appears not to be as well timed as is usual with German attacks. Its object is probably to open up the line of the Aisne, and it was very probably arranged by the enemy as a consequence of their success on Monday.

It is too early yet to speculate on the result of this last effort, but the check to von Hutier has much diminished its danger. The days of anxiety for the Allies are far from over, but the immediate situation has improved in the last twenty-four hours, thanks to the stout resistance of our French allies, and to the characteristic dash of their counterattacks.

General Pershing Reports 127 Casualties; 15 Killed in Action and 9 Died of Wounds

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—The War Department today gave out 127 casualties in the army abroad, bringing the grand total to 7,646. The list includes 15 killed in action, 9 died of wounds, 1 died in airplane accident, 17 died of accident and other causes, 60 severely wounded, 6 wounded, (degree undetermined,) 1 missing in action, and 18 died of disease.

Nine commissioned officers were included. Captain Don L. Caldwell and Lieutenants Albert E. Billing, George E. Butler, and Wayne William Schmidt were severely wounded. Captain Leonard K. Hart died of disease. Lieutenant Richard B. Reed was killed in an airplane accident. Lieutenants Wilmer Bodenstab, Max C. Buchanan, and Malcolm M. Johnstone were killed in action.

Lieut. Lyman B. Hoops Dead.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—Lieutenant Lyman B. Hoops, U. S. N., died of pneumonia at the Naval Hospital, London, England, June 8. Lieutenant Hoops was born at Greenville, Me., July 19, 1892, and was appointed to the Naval Academy from Connecticut in July, 1910; resigned in 1911, and was reappointed in May, 1911. He became an ensign June 6, 1915. He was temporarily appointed a Lieutenant Oct. 15, 1917, and served on board an American ship until the date of his illness. His father, Thomas Hoops, Jr., lives at 90 High Street, Middletown, Conn.

COL. CATLIN FAMOUS IN THE MARINE CORPS

Wounded Officer Formerly Commanded Sea Soldiers of Atlantic Fleet.

Colonel Albertus Wright Catlin, who is reported severely wounded in the Marine Corps casualty list given out yesterday, is a former commanding officer of the Atlantic Fleet Marines, and once commanded the Legation Guard in Peking, China.

Colonel Catlin was wounded in the marines' advance at Torcy last Friday at the head of the German salient facing Paris. His military career is distinctly marked by unusually valuable and gallant service. He is a native of Rome, N. Y., where his father, a hale and vigorous man of 89, still lives.

Catlin was graduated at the Naval Academy twenty-five years ago, and has served in all parts of the world. He was the Marine officer on guard on the battleship Maine when she was sunk in Havana Harbor in February, 1898. He saw arduous service in the Philippines, in Cuba, and in Mexico. In the expedition to Vera Cruz in April, 1914, he was in command of the entire force of Marines there engaged. For three years he was in chief command of all Marines of the Atlantic Fleet.

Following his brilliant achievements at Vera Cruz, he received the Medal of Honor for distinguished service. In 1916 and 1917 he was occupied with the special course of study in strategy at the Army War College, from which he was graduated in May, 1917. He immediately was assigned to command of the recruit station for marines at Quantico, Va. He there organized, fitted out, and dispatched to France the 5th Regiment of Marines, and following that the 6th Regiment, of which he took command. He sailed for France last October.

Captain John Blanchfield of the marines, reported killed in action, was on duty at the Brooklyn Navy Yard as a Sergeant Major until he was commissioned Captain and ordered to France with the marine contingent, which sailed in June 1917. It was said yesterday that he was killed in the recent marine advance by flying shrapnel. He was hurried to a base hospital, but failed to rally. Captain Blanchfield is survived by his wife and infant daughter. Their home is at 108 Ryerson Street, Brooklyn. He enlisted in the Marine Corps sixteen years ago. His mother, whom he recently visited for the first time in seventeen years, lives in Ireland.

Captain Don L. Caldwell, who is also reported severely wounded, is of Company G of the 166th Infantry, the Ohio unit of the Rainbow Division.

Sergeant Edward Svatba of the 28th Infantry, who is reported severely wounded, is a brother of Mrs. Antoinette Kubik of 336 East Seventieth Street, and one of five brothers, all of whom have joined the colors. Three of the brothers—Joseph, 26 years old; William, 18, and Emil, 17—are in the navy. The fifth, Charles, 25 years old, is in the 306th Infantry.

Emil Tuckerman, listed as dead of disease, was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Tuckerman of 307 East Eighty-third Street. He was of the Camp Upton division.

Private Henry Kirchner, one of the marines reported on Tuesday as killed in action, was a clerk in the Lyndhurst, L. I., National Bank when he enlisted in the marines in May of last year. He sailed for France last September. He was 27 years old, and is survived by his wife, who is now living at 156 Quitman Avenue, Newark. In a recent letter to her he wrote that he had been in the trenches twenty days.

Private Charles A. Engle, dead of disease, was a member of the 38th Infantry. He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Barbara Engle of 26 Clark Street, Long Island City.

Private Edward A. Buchlein of the marines, reported dead from wounds received in action, was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Conrad Buchlein of Union Hill, N. J. He enlisted in the Marine Corps in the first week after Congress declared war.

Private John Morrone, listed as killed in an accident, was of the Camp Upton division. He was 24 years old and a native of Roslyn, L. I.

Private Frederick G. Schwab, who met death in an accident, was 24 years old and the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick J. Schwab of 280A Cooper Street, Brooklyn. He was formerly employed by the Remington Arms Company. He was a member of the 305th Infantry.

Private Nils O. Anderson, dead in France as a result of an accident, lived at 11 St. Mark's Place, Brooklyn. Shortly before he entered the army a year ago he was married to Miss Marie Neilsen. Mrs. Anderson has been ill in the Brooklyn Hospital for the last three weeks and has not been informed of the death of her husband.

BURIAN CONSULTING ON POLAND'S FUTURE

Austrian Prince Controlled by Germany Is Expected to Take the Throne.

PEACE QUESTION ALSO UP

Belief in Berlin That Teuton Effort to End the War Will Soon Take Shape.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

AMSTERDAM, June 12, (Dispatch to The London Daily Express.)—The visit of Count Burian, Austrian Foreign Minister, to Berlin, is loudly advertised in the German newspapers as "an historical event." Burian's visit is certainly of more than usual importance in view of the fact that it will be the occasion of the first meeting of German and Austrian statesmen since the two Kaisers met at Whitsuntide at the German headquarters, when it was decided that the Austro-German alliance should be extended and turned into "a defensive union," embracing Turkey and Bulgaria.

Count Burian's conversations with Count Hertling are sure to deal with this extension of the alliance, and above all with the removal of the chief obstacles. One of them is the Polish question, and another is the continuance of a war in which Austria has no longer any interest.

Regarding the Polish muddle Vienna and Berlin are alike pledged to create a new Polish State. The difficulty arises when it has to be decided whether Germans or Austrians are to be supreme at Warsaw. Every one in Germany except a few far-seeing persons wants the greater portion of Poland, and especially the mining district of Dombrovo, simply annexed to Prussia, in view of the fact that Poland was conquered at the cost of German blood. In Vienna the feeling is exactly the reverse. The Poles in Austria do not want millions of Polish citizens to come under the hated rule of the Prussian King. They wish to see Poland under the sceptre of an Austrian prince, so that the practical unification of the Polish race may become possible.

What adds to the complication of the problem is the fact that, even if a Viennese archduke was set on the Polish throne, Prussia would never surrender the Polish provinces incorporated in the German Empire.

Count Burian is said to have come to Berlin with a view to defending the Austro-Polish solution of the question, whereas Hertling and Dr. von Kühlmann are known to be in favor of a German Polish settlement. Nobody either in Berlin or Vienna seems to have taken the least trouble to consult the Poles themselves.

What will happen nobody seems to know, but it is believed that some give-and-take plan will be adopted, giving Austria apparent control, while Germany keeps the real control in her hands.

The war itself is another obstacle because the Austrian people are utterly sick of it. They know that they could obtain a decent, fair peace, were it not for Germany. It is not surprising that on the day of Burian's arrival in Berlin the German Government authorized the publication of news that Count Hertling and Hindenburg are negotiating regarding a statement of Germany's war aims to be made shortly.

On the other hand Count Burian, in a series of interviews given to representatives of Vienna and Budapest newspapers, discusses the possibility of another peace move to be made by the Central Powers, and professes disgust at annexations.

All the indications are that the peace problem will have a place in the discussions between the two statesmen. Berlin considers it extremely probable that some peace move will be undertaken at an early date, as not until peace is well on the way and the Polish question nearing a solution can the Austro-German alliance work smoothly.

AMSTERDAM, June 12.—In a long letter to the Berlin Lokal-Anzeiger from the battlefield on the Aisne, dated May 27, Karl Rosner, Emperor William's favorite correspondent, describes the Emperor as appearing in radiant health, bronzed and bright-eyed, receiving a report from General von Boehm regarding the storming of the French positions on the Aisne.

Afterward, says the correspondent, the Emperor ascended to the old Camp des Romains, from which he viewed the panorama of the battlefield while seated at a rough deal table, upon which were maps and a telephone. Here he received news of the passage of a German battalion across the Aisne, upon which the correspondent quotes him as remarking:

SOCIALIST HEADS REICHSTAG COMMITTEE

Ebert, Who Helped Pass Peace Resolution, Is Elected to High Post.

AMSTERDAM, June 12. — Friedrich Ebert, German Socialist leader and Vice President of the Social Democratic Party, has been elected President of the Main Committee of the Reichstag.

The election of Friedrich Ebert as President of the Main Committee of the Reichstag means either that the Socialist minority in the Reichstag has been reclaimed by the military government or that the Socialists again have the upper hand, and that the Main Committee has elected a President in defiance of the military clique.

Limits Recruiting of Married Men.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—National Guard enlistment regulations made public today forbid the acceptance of married men or men with dependent relatives unless it is demonstrated that such dependents will be provided for. Inspectors are instructed to see that the rule is followed.

FRENCH ARE BEATEN, VON STEIN ASSERTS

AMERICA AS FORLORN HOPE

Declares Our Forces Were Thrown In When Advance Was Halting and Were Hurled Back.

AMSTERDAM, June 12.—"A great part of the French Army has been beaten," General von Stein, the Prussian War Minister, declared in a speech to the Reichstag, according to Berlin advices.

"The so-called Foch reserve army no longer exists," the Minister asserted. "The success of the Crown Prince's carefully prepared attacks against the French and British on the Chemin-des-Dames front on May 27 inflicted one of the gravest defeats the Entente has suffered during the entire war."

General von Stein made these statements in a review of the military situation at the second reading of the army budget yesterday.

The War Minister declared that the number and strength of the American troops up to the present was far below what reports spread by the Entente had led Germany to expect. The American troops, he said, had made their first appearance on the battlefront, but only at the moment when the German advance had come to a halt on the Marne.

"They, too, like the French reserves," he added, "were thrown into the battle in vain counterattacks and suffered the same fate."

Other American troops, the Minister said, are on quiet sections of the front.

"To a slight extent," he said, "the Entente has also brought Italians to the western front.

"Besides his losses in men, the enemy suffered an enormous loss in war materials and equipment," he said. "Immense stores of ammunition which were heaped up along the lines of communication behind the front of the defeated French Army likewise fell into our hands, just as previously we captured enormous stores from the British Army."

"Patched Up" British Front.

In alluding to the recent German advances, General von Stein said:

"The ground for these successes was prepared by the mighty blows dealt to the British Army in the battle of Armentières and before Mont Kemmel. Only by throwing in French reserves on the Somme and in Flanders was the enemy able to patch up the torn British front. The French divisions tied up in support of the British Army were naturally lacking on the Chemin-des-Dames, and the exhausted British divisions put in at this point could not long withstand the weight of the German attack. With unexampled rapidity, exceeding even that of the advance on the Italian front the previous Autumn, the attack was carried victoriously across the Aisne to the Marne.

"Filled with gratitude we regard our incomparable army. For almost four years it has borne with undiminished strength of will and confidence of victory all the dangers, exertions and hardships. The same dash which in 1914 led us into the enemy country decided the war in the East. It still lives today, as does our spirit of absolute superiority over our enemies. We are all the more conscious of the army's strength, and our confidence in its leaders to continue to lead on to victory. The enemy is not yet prepared for peace. It is still the day of the sword, but the sword remains sharp. We look forward to the issue of the struggle with complete confidence.

"The operations in Finland have led to the liberation of that country, which we hope in the future to find a loyal and reliable friend. On the eastern frontier, in the Ukraine, negotiations are proceeding with a view of fixing the line of demarkation. Local fighting with hostile bands flares up from time to time on the frontiers. In the interior, however, the path is paved for peaceful development.

"In Palestine renewed British attacks across the Jordan have collapsed before the bravery of the German and Turkish troops. In Mesopotamia the British have been unable fully to retain their initial successes. In the Caucasus the Turks have occupied the regions of Batum, Kars, and Erivan, which were secured to them by the peace treaty.

Says Entente Sees Defeat.

"The Entente is beginning to admit heavy defeat. Voices already are making themselves heard in Entente countries that Russian treachery is to blame for the Entente's heavy defeat. That is gratitude to a former ally which bled to death for England. It was not the disintegration of Russia that was responsible for the Entente's defeat. It must rather be said that the help of Russia, the crushing of which claimed a great part of our forces, hitherto had enabled the Entente to resist us militarily.

"The Entente is fully conscious of the seriousness of its position. It openly admits the melting away of its troops, and comforts its people with having the help of America. The belief in American assistance is being systematically grafted into the French people to arouse them to a continued endurance of useless bloodshed."

SWISS INDIGNANT AT RUSSIA'S WRONGS

By JULIUS WEST.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERNE, June 12.—The mailed fist continues its work in Russia. Under previous agreements made between the Germans and Austrians and Poles the last named were allowed to maintain an army, subject to certain restrictions. The purpose of this army was principally to act as a police force and to suppress Belshevism in Russian Poland. The First Corps of the Polish Army had its headquarters at Bobruisk. It has now been demobilized by order of the General commanding the German armies on the Russian front.

The terms of demobilization are instructive as showing German respect for Polish nationality. The order says the army corps shall submit without any qualification to German command. It may not be used as a skeleton of a future Polish Army. All contact between the army and the Polish Council of Regency is prohibited. The council is to have no authority whatever in the matter. All arms, munitions, equipment, horses, food, &c., are to become the property of the German Army. The Polish Army forfeits all administrative powers in the districts occupied by it. The soldiers are to be gradually sent to their homes on production of proofs of their ability to earn a living or possession of means of support.

Here in Berne the Germans' behavior toward Russia since the treaty of Brest-Litovsk has aroused keen dissatisfaction among many with by no means strong pro-Ally sympathies. One is assured by such neutrals that they have reason to believe that the more enlightened Germans are also displeased, but the censorship has been too strong lately for any expression of discontent. I am, however, assured that even in Germany there are many who refuse to regard the Brest or Bucharest treaties as definitive, and believe that the great mass of Germans would not oppose revision on less annexationist lines at a general peace conference.

The fact of the matter is, military successes are beginning to have a weaker effect upon the popular morale. While victory cheers, it no longer inebriates, and so we find the Vorwärts in a leading article, after a little patriotic tubthumping, agreeing that after all, victory or no victory, there is much truth in Lord Buckmaster's words, that the real winner of the war will be uncertain for ten or twenty years after it is over, and making oblique references to discontent.

AUSTRIANS LOSE HUGE BATTLESHIP

attack was made by Comamnders Rizzo and Luigi de Milazzo.

All Italy was thrilled by the news of this feat, which is regarded as probably the most remarkable performed by any navy during the war.

PARIS, June 12.—The loss of the Austrian battleship Szent Istvan—torpedoed in the Adriatic—is officially announced in Vienna, according to a Havas dispatch from Basle, Switzerland.

The Austrian official communication says that several officers and eighty of the crew of the battleship are missing.

The sinking of an Austrian dreadnought Monday is the third successful exploit of this kind by the Italian Navy within six months.

The Viribus Unitis class originally consisted of four ships each of 20,000 tons displacement, with twelve 12-inch, and twelve 5-inch guns—the Veribus Unitis, completed in 1912; the Tegethoff, 1913; the Prinz Eugen, 1914, and the Szent Istvan, 1915.

One of this class was sunk in the habor of Pola on May 15. By a similar naval achievement on the night of Dec. 9-10 the Italians torpedoed in the harbor of Trieste the predreadnoughts Wien and Monarch, (5,000 tons each,) sinking the former. Of this class only the Budapest now remains intact.

PLAN GREAT UNION OF MANUFACTURERS

there will be no problem during the war or after the war that it cannot solve," declared Colonel Austen Colgate of Jersey City, Vice President of the New Jersey Council.

The manufacturers again pledged their unfaltering support to President Wilson in a resolution which was adopted and telegraphed to the President, Vice President Marshall, and Speaker Champ Clark. The resolution says that the manufacturers "wish furthermore to express their confidence that the cause of America and our allies, being a just and righteous cause, not only will inevitably triumph over the forces of might, conquest, cruelty, and greed, but with every energy and every resource of the United States brought to bear, through the co-operation of capital and labor in supporting the valiant deeds of our army and navy here and overseas, the victory will be brought to a speedy realization."

Warren C. King, President of the New Jersey Council, upheld the Administration and urged that criticism and faultfinding be sidetracked. As a result of organization New Jersey manufacturers, he continued, have been able to obtain a hearing in opposition to what they considered the illegal abrogation of power contracts by the public service corporations. The manufacturers concede that public utilities are entitled to an advance where rate schedules do not allow a return on their investment, but they deny the right of utilities to advance rates upon unexpired contracts. The council's Insurance Committee also has registered a protest against the unfairness of the present employer's liability insurance rates in New Jersey.

Governors Brumbaugh of Pennsylvania and Edge of New Jersey sent messages of encouragement to the War Conference. Governor Brumbaugh said he would favor the commandeering of labor if it was found that the manufacturers were in need of such an exigency. Charles A. Otis, Chief of the Bureau of Resource and Conversion of the War Industries Board, said:

"It is obvious that, as we progress, the Government will be, to a great extent, the only buyer. It is facing us now that many industries must immediately develop their organization along the line of war requirements or be put out of business. To save this very serious situation is the work of the Resource and Conversion Section, and its work is dependent upon the hearty support of every business man of the country.

"Helpfulness between districts will be accepted. Where an organization is doing a certain work well and another resource must be started to keep up the volume, the successful man will be expected to give all possible information to the one starting in to increase this production. A study must be made of the fuel and power situations so that districts loaded with work will not increase beyond the limit of the power and transportation facilities of the country, but others be developed for the work."

H. E. Miles, Chairman of the Industrial Training Section for the War Emergency Council of National Defense, said: "This war is a war of machinists and of mechanics. There are many idle men in some sections of the country, but the draft is lessening their number somewhat. About one-third of the army at the front must consist of skilled men for repairs and maintenance. We must take over great numbers of skilled men from the nonessential trades into war production. We must stop hiring and firing and pursue instead the English and French method of fitting each man to the job he is to do. Every employer of 300 men or more in France has been required to place a training department in his plant. The English Ministry of Munitions virtually makes the same requirement in its contracts for supplies. A start in this direction has been made in America. A laundry shirt ironer was able after three days' training in the Bridgeport Trade School to tend a milling machine.

"It is coming to be said that women are more skillful than men in light machining. Of course this is a gross misstatement. A high class of women is coming in, and both men and women are sticking better because they know their work better. One of the biggest things we must do now is to make our wage rates with the utmost intelligence, and then never cut them until the end of the war. This will give us from 20 to 50 per cent. greater production in many places."

THREATEN RUSSIA OVER CZECH TROOPS

German Paper Warns Against Permitting Them to Join the Entente Forces.

SAID TO NUMBER 150,000

Deserters from Austrian Army Going to Vladivostok Resist Attempts to Disarm Them.

AMSTERDAM, June 12.—If the Czechoslovak troops which fought in the Russian Army are permitted to leave Russia with arms and join the Entente forces Russia will "endanger her dearly-bought peace," says the Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung.

The number of these troops is estimated, the newspaper says, to be 150,000. These men, for the most part, went voluntarily over to Russia from the Austro-Hungarian army and are distributed over Northeastern Russia.

The newspaper says that the Soviet Government has not permitted their transfer, but that there is sympathy with the idea in Moscow. It adds that for the Russian Government to consent to the plan would be a violation of neutrality.

MOSCOW, May 30, (Associated Press.)—As the result of an order by Leon Trotzky to disarm Czechoslovak troops who were endeavoring to travel to Vladivostok and of directions which he gave to prevent their movement to that port, a serious outbreak occurred, culminating in violent clashes between Czechoslovak and Soviet troops in several places.

After defeating Soviet troops the Czechoslovaks seized the railway stations at Penza, in the Volga region, and boarded trains going in the direction of Chelyabinsk, which 12,000 Czechoslovaks are holding.

A battle also took place near Zlatoust, where the Czechoslovaks involved were obliged to abandon their train and force their way forward on foot. Government reinforcements are flowing in from all sides, and great efforts are being made to subdue the Czechoslovaks, as they are regarded as a serious menace, being well armed and possessing armored cars. In addition, they are obtaining aid from anti-Soviet elements.

A statement issued by Trotzky as Minister of War says that the Japanese landing at Vladivostok and the movements in Siberia of General Semenoff, leader of the Siberian anti-Bolshevist forces, has made impossible the further transportation of Czechoslovak forces to Vladivostok. The Ministry of War, however, he said, intended to investigate the possibility of their going by the Archangel route. He reiterated his order to disarm them and to shoot those who resisted, adding that everything would be done to enable them to leave Russia.

MONARCHY FOR FINLAND PROPOSED TO LANDTAG

Government Measure Provides for Independent Kingdom with Hereditary Ruler.

HELSINGFORS, Finland, June 12.—The Government proposal for the establishment of a new form of Government has been delivered to the Landtag. It provides that Finland shall be an independent kingdom, with a kingship hereditary in the male line. The King may not simultaneously be the ruler of any other State. He shall have an absolute veto in matters affecting the alteration of the constitution and land and sea traffic. In other matters his veto may be overruled by a two-thirds majority of the Landtag elected at a new election.

The King also is to be invested with broad powers regarding treaties with foreign States, but he may not begin an offensive war or sign peace treaties without the consent of the Landtag.

The proposed form of Government appears to be based largely on the Swedish constitution of 1809.

Two agrarian Senators have resigned because of opposition to a monarchical form of government. Two hundred and fifty prominent members of the Young Finnish Party have published a manifesto favoring a monarchy.

DROPS PROF. LOMONOSSOFF.

New Ally of the Bolsheviki Here Loses His Official Post.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 12. — Boris Bakhmetieff, the Russian Ambassador, today removed from office Professor G. V. Lomonossoff, head of the Russian Railway Mission to the United States. Professor Lomonossoff was appointed by the Kerensky Government, which Ambassador Bakhmetieff also represents, and with which the State Department maintains a working arrangement in spite of the fact that the Soviet or Bolshevist Government claims to be the central authority of Russia.

No official statement concerning the reason for the removal of Professor Lomonossoff was obtainable from the Russian Embassy, but it was well understood that the removal was due to his public declarations this week against allied intervention in Russia, and in favor of American recognition of the Bolshevist regime.

On Monday Professor Lomonossoff gave to the press in New York a prepared statement making these declarations. Last night he made a speech at a Bolshevist mass meeting in Madison Square Garden in which, while he asserted that he was not a Bolshevik, he reiterated what was contained in the statement. He was loudly cheered by the Bolsheviki element present, and hissed by the Mensheviki or anti-Bolshevist group who were there.

DOWNED 29 GERMANS ON THE NOYON SECTOR

French and British Airmen's Record for This Offensive—Got 10 on Tuesday.

LONDON, June 12.—The official communication dealing with aviation, issued this evening, says:

"Yesterday British airplanes assisted French aviators in a counterattack on the western portion of the Noyon battlefront by special patrols sent out to deal with German machines, as well as by vigorous and constant bombing of enemy trenches, gun positions, and communications.

"A heavy machine gun fire was directed from a low altitude upon hostile troops and transports throughout the same area.

"Ten German airplanes were destroyed during these operations and four were driven down out of control. We lost three machines.

"Two of our machines reported yesterday as missing have returned.

"Since the German attack began on the Noyon sector on June 9 our squadrons, co-operating with the French, dropped twenty-one tons of bombs and accounted for twenty-nine enemy machines.

"The total weight of bombs dropped by us yesterday, including those dropped beyond the French battlelines, amounted to fourteen tons. On Tuesday night our night-bombing machines heavily attacked the railway at Cambrai and billets at Frémicourt, dropping four tons of bombs without loss."

French Account for Thirteen Planes.

PARIS, June 12.—The night report from the French War Office thus summarizes aerial operations on the front of the German drive:

"Our day bombing machines continued their operations yesterday, participating with their usual audacity in a counterattack launched by us on the Montdidier-St. Maur front. They attacked with bombs enemy divisions who had come up to sustain the shock of our troops against the right wing.

"Before this attack the enemy units were obliged to disperse, leaving dead on the ground, convoys were bottled up, and heavy artillery batteries, under heavy punishment, were abandoned by the gunners, who ceased to fire. A convoy took fire, and a great fire broke out in Ressons-sur-Matz, where there was a large concentration of enemy troops. A total of twenty-six tons of projectiles were dropped with excellent results.

"During the night our bombing squadrons dropped thirteen tons of explosives on railway stations in the enemy zone, notably in the region of Nesle, Roye, and Ressons-sur-Matz. Additional fires were started by these bombardments.

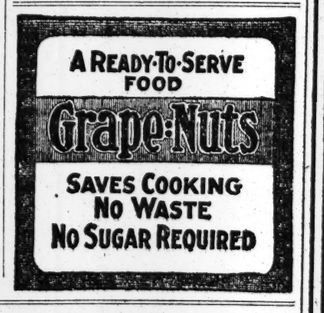
"On June 11 our pursuit machines brought down or put out of commission thirteen enemy planes."

FRENCH REPUBLICANS CONFIDENT OF VICTORY

League in Appeal Declares German Army Is Certain to be Crushed.

PARIS, June 12.—The Havas Agency publishes an appeal by the Left Republican Leagues to the French people, proclaiming the certainty that the German armies will be broken against a steel wall, and asking the citizens to uphold the valorous soldiers, in imitating them by showing inflexible will, a calm heart and a clear mind.

"We must neither disguise nor exaggerate the danger," says the appeal. "If it increases, so, too, will our indefatigable resolution increase. So it was with our fathers in '93 against the whole of Europe combined, endangering the revolution and the future of all democracies by endangering France."



WILSON STANDS BY HIS RUSSIAN POLICY

Still Convinced, It Is Said, That Intervention Now Would Be Grave Mistake.

SITUATION MAY CHANGE

Hope That Revolt Against Bolsheviki Will Reach Stage Where Co-operation Would Be Advisable.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—Indications today were that President Wilson does not contemplate an early modification of his Russian policy, it being declared at the State Department that "there is no change in the situation and no change of policy." The belief is expressed here that there must be more definite action than has yet been taken to convince the President that the people of Russia desire allied intervention and that the effects of such intervention would not result in turning the Russian masses over to Germany.

In Entente diplomatic circles, however, there is a conviction that by next Spring Germany will have obtained a new army from Russia and send it against the Allies in the west.

"Unless the Russians find the Allies able and willing to assist and protect them they will naturally turn to Germany, who will already have obtained control of the country, and all resistance to Germany will have ceased," it was stated in one quarter.

The allied view of President Wilson's position concerning Russia, as understood here, is that he is still uncertain about the possible effect of intervention on the Russian people themselves, but the view is also voiced that the United States will take a definite step at the proper moment and as soon as the situation warrants.

"When a decision is reached by the United States, no matter how long delayed apparently, it has invariably been found to have been the right decision and to have been taken at the right time," one Entente diplomat declared.

Reports reaching Washington through both official and unofficial channels indicate that opposition to the Bolsheviki is crystallizing. In view of this the suggestion was advanced today that President Wilson is hopeful that the new counter-revolutionary movement denounced by the Soviet authorities and believed to have as its leaders the Cadet and Social Revolutionary Parties will create such a situation as will make physical co-operation between America and the Allies on one hand and Russia on the other practicable and advisable without risking a misunderstanding by the Russian people.

Cadet Move Stirs Russians Here.

The appeal for intervention sent to the United States Government by the Central Committee of the Cadet or Constitutional Party of Russia stirred the Russian colony of this city yesterday to renewed hope in the possibility of obtaining President Wilson's approval of an allied expedition to Russia. Among the leaders and authorized spokesmen of the colony, such an appeal coming from the Cadet Party was considered as a cry for help from all the patriotic elements of the Russian people.

At the Russian Club, which opened last night at 99 Riverside Drive, the call of the Constitutional Party was discussed with great fervor, and representatives of all shades of political opinion expressed the hope that the United States Government would now come to the realization that the whole Russian people was yearning for liberation from the oppression of the Germans, on the one hand, and the demoralising rule of the Bolsheviki, on the other.

The Bolshevist factions in New York, appreciating the effect that the appeal of the Constitutional Party of Russia might have on Washington, hastened to counteract it with the charge that the Cadets were counter-revolutionary and represented a class that had made the "commercial penetration of Rusisa" by Germany possible.

In reply to these charges, A. J. Sack, director of the Russian Bureau of Information, pointed out that the Constitutional Democratic Party before the revolution stood foremost in the struggle against Czarism, and that it was this party which practically formed the Milukoff Cabinet and held the helm of the Government during the stormy days of the revolution.

All groups of the Russian colony joined yesterday in a general denunciation of Professor G. Y. Lomonossoff, head of the Russian Railway Mission, for his sudden support of the Bolshevist demand that the United States give full recognition to the Soviet government. So far as the big Bolshevist mass meeting of Tuesday night was concerned, the Russians paid little or no attention to its possible effect because the meeting, they contended, in no sense expressed the sentiment of the real Russian colony in New York which was solidly opposed to the recognition of the Soviet government and was strongly in favor of allied intervention.

FIND SECRET TREATY FOR DIVIDING GALICIA

Poles Incensed at Austrian Compact and Also Threaten German Schemes.

AMSTERDAM, June 12.—According to the Weser Zeitung's Vienna correspondent, during a meeting of the Parliamentary Committee at the Polish Club, the existence was disclosed of a secret treaty with the Ukraine, in which the Austrian Government agreed on the division of Galicia by the end of July at the latest.

The dispatch says that the Austrian Government's attitude on the Polish question was sharply criticised. It was charged with not having fulfilled a single polish demand.

HOLD EX-LORD MAYOR FOR DEALINGS WITH FOE

Sir Joseph Jonas, Steel Manufacturer of Sheffield, Is a Naturalized German.

LONDON, June 12.—Sir Joseph Jonas, Lord Mayor of Sheffield in 1900, and a steel manufacturer, was in Bow Street Police Court today on the charge that, with various other persons whose names were not known, he "did obtain and communicate certain information prejudicial to the interests of the State and information useful to the enemy, and information relating to prohibited places and things therein."

The only evidence given was with regard to the arrest, by the detective who effected it. He said Sir Joseph made no reply when the warrant was read to him.

The prisoner was remanded for a week on bail of $15,000.

The offense with which Sir Joseph Jonas is charged was committed, according to The Evening News, before the war began. It is understood, the newspaper says, that a War Office official will figure in the case.

Jonas came to England when a young man from Bingen-on-the-Rhine, where he was born in 1845, and was naturalized in 1876. He began business at Sheffield in the steel industry and became head of the firm of Jonas & Colver, one of the leading firms in the steel trade. He took a prominent part in local politics and received knighthood from King Edward when the King opened Sheffield University. He was at that time Lord Mayor of Sheffield.

A Vital War Measure

Make Use of Our Highways, Conserve Steel, and Relieve Transportation Facilities in a Big and Practical Way

TO BUILD 50,000 steel freight cars and 1,250 locomotives takes approximately 1,437,000 tons of steel.

It takes only 300,000 tons of steel to build 200,000 motor trucks with equal ton mile freight-carrying capacity. This is a saving of over 1,100,000 tons of steel.

By using the highways, in addition to relieving railways of a portion of their freight, tremendous terminal expenses and congestion are saved, as well as the cost of transferring to and from terminals. Motor trucks over highways carry merchandise direct from shipper to consignee.

Greater use of our highways is imperative.

WEST POINT MEN SENT OUT TO WAR

MILLION IN FRANCE SOON

Gen. March Says That Superior Leadership Will Smash the German Machine.

SECRETARY GIVES DIPLOMAS

Class Is the Third Turned Out by the Academy Since America Entered War.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, June 12.—The United States Military Academy graduated 136 new officers in the regular army this morning. It was the third class graduated by the academy since the United States declared war on Germany in April of last year, and the occasion was made notable by the presence of Secretary of War Baker, General Peyton C. March, Chief of the General Staff; Major Gen. William L. Sibert, head of the Gas Division of the army; Major Gen. Harry F. Hodges, commanding the National Army Division at Camp Devens, Mass.; Brig. Gen. Thomas Q. Donaldson, and scores of other officers of lesser rank in the regular establishment.

The graduation was not a boisterously happy event, such as for many years marked the finishing touch to West Pointers in times of peace. The hundreds of older officers and their families, the close kin and friends of the cadets, all realized that the event was a solemn one in the lives of the young officers, a fact which was emphasized by General March when he told the members of the class that they were to be "plunged practically at once" into the mighty struggle now being waged in France.

The exercises were held in the flag-draped gymnasium on the hill just above the Superintendent's home and below the famous Memorial Chapel on the mountain, a church which Secretary Baker described yesterday as the most beautiful in all America. There were three speeches and all of them brief. The first was made by Colonel Tillman, the Superintendent; the second by General March, and the last by Secretary Baker, who subsequently handed to the graduates the certificates which made them officers of the regular army.

Class Has Had Shortest Course.

The gymnasium was crowded when the members of the class of 1919, appearing for the last time in their cadet uniforms, marched into the hall. On the stage were grouped the tactical and academic staffs of the academy, the Secretary of War, and the visiting officers of high rank. The Rev. Dr. H. Percy Silver, who is soon to retire as Chaplain of the academy, offered the prayer, which was a petition for victory for the allied arms in Europe and for the guidance and protection of the young officers so soon to take their places in the first line overseas. Colonel Tillman spoke briefly.

General March followed Colonel Tillman.

"I have only a few words," said the General, "to say to you young gentlemen. You are particularly fortunate in being able to make a return to the United States so soon after graduation for the careful training which has been given you here at West Point. You stand today with opportunity confronting you. You are to be plunged practically at once into the great conflict which is rending the world, and among you are the commanders, in the near future, of important units. You will receive advancement in so short a period as to test every ounce of strength and every bit of military knowledge you have acquired.

"The war in Europe has shown finally and conclusively that personal courage is the commonest attribute of mankind. All nations have it. It is not dependent upon traditions, ancestors, or the righteousness of the cause for which men fight. The regular, the volunteer, the drafted man all have it. So in order to take your proper place in the military machine, to make a proper return to the United States for your education and training, it is not sufficient to fight bravely and to die gallantly. You will find that your associates from whatever source taken will do that as well as you.

"You will be confronted by a perfectly organized military machine. That machine is going to be smashed, and the only way it can be smashed is by superior leadership on our part.

Officers of "Modern Crusade."

"This great peace-loving country is giving to the conflict the very heart of the nation. Its sons are now in France to the number of hundreds of thousands, and we are only just beginning. The problem of getting trained officers, trained leaders for this great force is one of the most serious among those confronting us. Among the great number of officers struggling to fit themselves for their duties you should be marked men. Much will be expected of you and you cannot fail.

"This large class of trained officers, graduating at a time when their country needs them more than at any time in its history, are face to face with the most glorious adventure in the history of the world—a modern crusade, where an entire nation, without thought of territorial aggrandizement or of material gain, has planted its standard upon the soil of France in order that freedom shall be guaranteed to posterity.

"We have now transported to France a large army, the units of which are winning the admiration of our allies whenever they get into action. We are going to put into this war the number of men necessary to win it, whatever that number may be. We are going to equip them, clothe them, and feed them, and build a fleet of transports and supply ships of sufficient magnitude to transport both men and supplies across the ocean to France.

"The President, our Commander in Chief, has asked 'why limit the army to 5,000,000 men?' and that sentence is the keynote of success. We are going to ship those millions to France, and no submarine menace can make us alter that policy one iota. And no temporary success, no gain of territory in France will have any effect upon us except to increase the number of our men that we shall send over there.

"So I say to you, men of the graduating class, this is the greatest time in the history of the world to live in—go in and win."

Secretary Baker began by telling of the presentation to him, while in France, for the Military Academy, of the bronze replica of the cadet of the Ecole Polytechnique, which, he added, had been accepted by the Government statement made a few days ago that more than 700,000 American soldiers were now in Europe, and said that the Government would continue to transport them by the hundreds of thousand would soon be mounted on a commanding site at West Point. The statue, which is of heroic size, will stand on a base of stone quarried from the battlefield of Verdun.

The Secretary discoursed on the war and its causes, and said that as Rome failed in ancient times to accomplish what Germany seeks to do, so will the Germany of today fail. He repeated his sands until there could be no possible question as to the outcome of the struggle.

"It is not unfair," the Secretary added, "to speculate that we will shortly pass the million mark. We have joined a combination in which France and Britain and Italy and the United States have assembled in France the greatest force for righteousness the world has ever seen. We see in that combination a submergency of international discord and of national selfishness.

Allies Stanch to End.

"I can imagine that when the God of nations calls the roll of those who have been faithful England will say, 'I am here with my ships and my men. My losses are grievous, but my spirit is unbroken.'

"Italy answers, too, from the Alps to the Asiago. She says: 'My sons are here dying and struggling, but holding the mountain passes against those who would crush us.'

"And France—oh, the beauty and sublimity of her response: 'I am here, bleeding at every pore. My country is in part occupied. The mother earth has received to itself again hundreds of thousands of my dear children. But our heads are high, our determination is unbroken. They shall not pass.'

"And when America answers, does it not thrill you to hear: 'We, too, have crossed the danger-infested sea as Lafayette and Rochambeau did long years since; we have co-ordinated our workshops and fabricated our materials. We are marching hundreds of thousands strong, and we will continue to be here to the end.'

"But there is a deeper meaning even than this. We are not fighting for the seen thing. We are fighting for the unseen thing. And in this we find our sanction in the Bible, where we read that the things that are seen are temporal. The things that are unseen are eternal."

The Secretary then delivered the diplomas to the graduates, all but one of the 137 automatically becoming officers of the United States. The exception was Ken Wang, a Chinese Government cadet, who distinguished himself by graduating as the twelfth man of the class, one of the largest ever sent out from West Point.

SEIZE BRITISH NAVY WAS TIRPITZ PLAN

Then German Admiral Was Going to Collect War Bill from U. S. with It.

FEARS ANTI-TRUST LAW

Mr. Gerard Says It Should Be Repealed to Compete with Germany After War.

"Germany is out to make America pay for the war," said ex-Ambassador James W. Gerard, speaking yesterday at the monthly meeting of the New York Board of Trade and Transportation. "Von Tirpitz," he declared, "has said that it is the aim of Germany to seize the British Navy, man it with German crews, come to America, and demand from this country the cost of Germany's war. This statement was made a year before I left Germany, but it did not reach you because of the German censor."

"Prussianism must be destroyed," Mr. Gerard continued. "For if Prussian militarism and autocracy are victorious we in America will never have a happy moment, for life here will have to be devoted to preparation for future wars. When Germany goes to war it does so for money. The invasion of Belgium and that valuable part of Northern France tells the story. Everywhere they have gone they have seized property of all kinds, forced the poor people to pay enormous indemnities, ruined their trade, shipped their materials and machinery to Germany, and what they did not use they willfully destroyed.

Dream of Great Indemnity.

"Every business man in Germany knows he is ruined unless Germany wins the war, and it is their great dream that by winning the war they can collect a great indemnity from America as well as from the Allies. They hope that by winning the war they will destroy the great carrying trade we now are building up and ruin our foreign trade in South America and other countries.

"They know they will never be able to pay the interest on the obligations incurred during the war, and therefore Germany is determined to make other nations pay her bills. The price of the German mark has been maintained artificially by the Government."

Mr. Gerard warned his hearers that after the war the United States would have to face an entirely different economic situation, and when he intimated that the Sherman anti-trust law should be repealed to meet post-bellum conditions he was heartily applauded.

"Germany," he said, "has created a socialistic method of buying and selling. The Government is in control of all purchases and selling, both in raw materials and finished products. If the Sherman anti-trust law remains on our statute books we will not be able to compete in foreign markets after the war or to cope with the new German economic system."

Criticise Naval Bill.

The Board of Trade and Transportation unanimously adopted a report of the Executive Committee on the "walking delegate" and the war. This report stated that the nation was threatened by the "anti-efficiency provision" of the Naval Appropriation bill as it passed the House of Representatives. According to the committee, the payment of bonuses, of premiums, of additional compensation above regular wages was forbidden, and no inducement could be made to increase output by workmen employed under the Government. This provision, it contended, was designed by the "walking delegates" to hold back the efficient workmen to the pace of production of the laggard.

Cox and Willis Candidates in Ohio.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, June 12.—Governor James H. Cox today announced his candidacy for re-election in November on the Democratic ticket. He said that because of war conditions, he would make no campaign. Frank B. Willis of Delaware, former Governor, announced his candidacy on the Republican ticket. He declared for State and national prohibition, and announced that he would make only a limited campaign.

WILSON'S LATEST TALK ANGERS GERMAN PRESS

Sharp Disbelief Expressed as to His Sincerity in Addressing Mexican Editors.

AMSTERDAM, June 12.—President Wilson's address to Mexican editors, which was printed fully in only a few German papers, has provoked varying degrees of angry outbursts from them, ranging from crude personal abuse by the Pan German papers to ill-tempered disbelief in the President's motives on the part of the more moderate organs.

To these are added sardonic allusions to President's Wilson's dealings with small neutrals. Even the Vorwärts says that these dealings "will be a warning to Mexico against the dangers threatening the political independence of a country when its economic dependence enters as a factor," and calls it "an audacious assertion of the President that the United States does not seek economic advantages."

MEXICO CITY, June 11.—President Wilson's address to Mexican journalists in Washington last week was printed prominently by most Mexican newspapers, but comment on the sentiments expressed is slight, especially from Government officials. The speech was distributed broadcast throughout Mexico by telegraph and by mail.

General Garcia Vigil, President of the Chamber of Deputies, is the only Government leader whose views have been made public. The General said he believed that the President's speech contained serious advice to democratic people, especially to Mexico, not to be dazzled by German militarism, "which destroys all liberties."

ASKS MEDITERRANEAN UNITY

LONDON, June 12.—Writing in The Daily Telegraph, Archibald S. Hurd, a naval authority, pleads for a unified command of the allied fleets in the Mediterranean, especially in view of the probable accession to the strength of the navies of the Central Powers through the acquisition by Germany of the bulk of the ships belonging to the former Russian Black Sea fleet.

The naval command in the Mediterranean, Mr. Hurd points out, rests with the French, and in the Adriatic with the Italians. The British naval forces in both these seas are acting under the French and Italian Admirals, while the American and Japanese navies also are operating there and Greek and Brazilian naval participation is impending. Thus seven navies represented in the Mediterranean would be under divided command.

It is possible, the writer thinks, that eight capital ships of the Russian navy, in addition to several cruisers, destroyers, and submarines, will be equipped with trained German crews and issue from the Dardanelles at a moment selected by the enemy. These vessels, added to Austria's considerable fleet, would comprise a formidable force.

MINOTTO DROPS HIS FIGHT.

Swift's Interned Son-in-Law Dismisses Habeas Corpus Petition.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 12.—Count James Minotto, son-in-law of Louis F. Swift, millionaire packer, now confined at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., today abandoned his legal battle to escape internment as an alien enmy for the duration of the war.

Great surprise was caused by the sudden change of policy. Henry Veeder, chief counsel for Minotto, said:

"Minotto is interned upon the sole ground that he was born in Germany. This fact, of course, is admitted. The court held that he was subject to internment upon that ground in spite of the fact that he was an Italian citizen. Since the court has held it to be the law that a citizen of a friendly allied country may be interned simply because he happens to have been born in Germany, we must abide by the law."

No. 4 of a Series of REAL BOY Talks!

Is He YOUR Boy?

The Bean Stalk Boy Who Shot up Like a Reed

He's gawky and awkward, yet young and underdeveloped. He would wear kids' clothes if his age counted, but his size has got to be reckoned with, and that's where his pride comes in. Yet mother wants to keep him looking young. Buy his clothes here where the most youthful models are made with narrow chests and shoulders for just that boy.

—Shirts long and skinny, that won't bunch up around the neck and shoulders.

—Thick Sweaters, to make him look a little bit fatter and incidentally keep him warm.

Enlightenment!

A New Book—
"On The Threshold Of The Unseen"
The investigation of a recognized scientist, into the evidence of life after death.
By Wm. F. Barrett, F. R. S., introduction by James S. Hyslop.

The Future Life

Not proving the Immortality Of The Soul, but acknowledging that experimental evidence "does remove the objections raised as to the possibility of survival" after death to some of us.
Written in lucid English, with convincing excerpts from the foremost minds to illustrate the argumentative passages. Again showing how the very "unrest" of the reasoning faculty rejects as "unproved" every "known cause," inferring that the only absolute proof we can command is that elusive something within us called spirit.

N.Y.U. GIVES DEGREES TO 706 GRADUATES

132 SENIORS IN SERVICE

Dr. David Jayne Hill Tells of Decay of German Universities Under Militarism.

With the graduation of the 1918 class 706 degrees were conferred yesterday afternoon at the Eighty-sixth annual commencement of New York University at Gould Memorial Library, University Heights. Of the graduates 132 were recorded as being in the service of the United States.

The regular order of exercises was broken to permit the early departure of Charles M. Schwab, Director General of the United States Fleet Corporation. In presenting Mr. Schwab with the degree of Doctor of Commercial Science the Rev. George Alexander, President of the Council of the University, explained that the shipbuilding controller had been suddenly called away to his duties and was unable to make an address of acceptance. The others to receive honorary degrees were:

Henry Pomeroy Davison, Doctor of Laws.

In presenting their candidates for degrees to the Chancellor, the deans of the several schools and colleges gave figures to show how the number of students in their respective divisions had fallen off. The two schools on the Heights, the College of Arts and Pure Science and the School of Applied Science, suffered the greatest percentage of decreased membership.

In his address to the graduates David Jayne Hill, former Ambassador to Germany, mentioned the fact that more than one-half of the graduates of New York University were in the service.

Dr. Hill spoke of the effect of State patronage and State control in bringing about the "moral default of the German universities," a system, he declared, "that explains what would otherwise be incredible. Originally the impregnable strongholds of truth in the realm of intellect and of right in the realm of morals," said Dr. Hill, "they have lost their independence of judgment and expression and become mere creatures of the State.

"It is an indisputable fact that, whatever the German professors may privately think and believe," he went on, "from the beginning of the war until now not one of them, so far as is known, has spoken out in the interest of humanity unless he had already escaped from imperial jurisdiction and believed himself safe in Switzerland or in some other foreign land."

Declaring that the world never again can have the same reverence for their authority it had before, "because it is warped and denatured by subjection to another authority morally inferior to their own," Dr. Hill continued, "from whatever point of view one regards the present international situation, it must be conceded that the position of the Central Powers, the aggressors in this war, is strictly and faultlessly a logical deduction from a basic doctrine. If the State is power, if superior force is the basis of government, then the subjugation of the universities, their abject submission, the aggressions, the atrocities, the frightfulness, are all perfectly defensible in any coherent discussion of the subject.

"We hear much in these times of social reconstruction. Great empires have fallen and revolution seems everywhere impending. We, in America, shall not be exempt from radical proposals of change. Our enemies will see to it, they are seeing to it now, that this Republic shall be threatened in its very foundations. Who is to resist them? Who is to stand for our great inheritance? Who is to say to the incursions of Bolshevism, as we are saying to Prussianism, that the rights of men, as well as States, to self-determination, to the possession and use of their own, under just and equal laws, must and shall be preserved?"

Before giving his address Chancellor Elmer Ellsworth Brown asked that the entire audience give a silent prayer for our men over there. In his address he warned against the lowering of educational standards in the United States. After advocating that college students remain at their studies to fit themselves for work as serious and necessary as that of soldiers and sailors, he said he intended to ask President Wilson and Congress "to institute a general inquiry into the educational needs of the country at large. Such an inquiry should show us how our schools and colleges can do more toward the winning of the war. As it is, they are doing much, but not enough. The war admonishes us all, everywhere, to be content with no service less than the best that can be given."

187 DEGREES GIVEN BY FORDHAM UNIVERSITY

Ex-Governor David I. Walsh of Massachusetts Delivers the Address to the Students.

One hundred and eighty-seven degrees, including eight honorary awards, were conferred yesterday afternoon at the seventy-third annual commencement of Fordham University. The exercises were held on the campus. The Rev. Joseph A. Mulry, S. J., President of the university, presided, and on his right sat Mgr. Joseph V. Mooney, Vicar General, and on his left David I. Walsh, ex-Governor of Massachusetts, who delivered the address to the graduates.

The graduates, recipients of honorary degrees, the Faculties and alumni assembled in front of Alumni Hall and marched across the quadrangle to the large platform and colonnade that had been erected.

A deputation from St. Elizabeth's College, Convent Station, N. J., made the presentation of a purse of $2,400 to purchase and fully equip an ambulance for the Fordham University ambulance unit now in active service. The pledge was made that the gift would be renewed "as often as the exigencies of war may demand." Father Mulry said that after almost a year's service many of the boys were wounded and gassed, but none had yet been called upon "to make the supreme sacrifice." He declared there was no brighter page in the annals of Fordham than the honor roll of the men in service.

The address to the graduates was delivered by ex-Governor Walsh of Massachusetts, who spoke on "Service." Walter A. Lynch spoke for the graduates of the Law School on "The Voice of Our Government." Thomas A. Barry of St. John's College spoke on "The Pope and the War."

Two Jesuit priests, the Rev. Richard H. Tierney, S. J., editor of America, and the Rev. John C. Reville, S. J., received honorary degrees. It is the first time at Fordham that honorary degrees have been conferred on Jesuit priests. The degree of Master of Arts in course was also conferred on three women for the first time. The honors of the graduating class of St. John's College were won by Thomas A. Barry.

The Hughes medal for mental philosophy was awarded to Raymond L. Mulvihill of the senior class. The medal for the best public debate was won by Arthur C. Donahue. A purse of $50 in gold for the best essay on a religious topic was awarded to Dennis Q. Blake.

The army khaki and the navy blue were prominent among the graduates, whose ranks were diminished by calls to the colors.

Seton Hall Confers Degrees.

ORANGE, N. J., June 12.—The sixty-second annual commencement exercises of Seton Hall College, South Orange, were held this morning in Alumni Hall, when nineteen young men were graduated with the degree of Bachelor of Arts, and the Master of Arts degree was conferred upon members of the Class of 1917. The honorary degree of Doctor of Laws was given to the Very Rev. Raymond Meagher, O. P., of New York, provincial of the Dominican Order in the East, who made the address to the graduates. Three medals were given to Francis Ryan of Hoboken, the Bishop McQuade medal for metaphysics, the Mgr. Preston medal for ethics, and the medal for Christian evidences. The medal for logic was given to Thomas A. Boland of West Orange.

Wilson Helps Water-Saving Move.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—All fountains in the White House grounds were stopped today at President Wilson's direction because of a threatened water shortage in Washington. Water probably will be cut off from the fountains in all Washington parks.

London Theatre to Lodge Americans

LONDON, June 12.—One of London's largest theatres has been rented by the American Committee of Engineers for a rendesvous and hotel for sailors and soldiers. The building will accommodate several hundred persons. Lodging and American food will be provided for men passing through London or who are in the city on leave. While the enterprise is primarily for Americans, men of the allied forces will be welcomed.

JOHNSON DEMANDS LIGHT ON WOOD CASE

California Senator Insists That Government Explain Its Treatment of General.

CALLS IT AUTOCRATIC ACT

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 13.—Declaring that the Government's silence regarding the reasons for deposing Major Gen. Leonard Wood from his command on the eve of its departure for France "illustrates the extent to which we have gone in transmuting this democracy into an autocracy," Senator Hiram Johnson of California today demanded, "for the love of God," that the Administration explain to the American people.

Senator Johnson said that in no other country would the Government have dared to retire its ranking Major General from his active field command without giving some explanation to the public. After warning the Senate that it should hold fast to its privileges, in anticipation of the day when it would be necessary to undo many things done because of the war, Senator Johnson said:

"Recently there have been events which show how we have transmuted our Government. I refer first to the story of General Leonard Wood. I refer to that story because I think it illustrates in a degree that little else could illustrate just how far we have gone in this Government transmutation, and just how little regarded now are the Congress and even the people of the United States."

Senator Johnson then read excerpts from editorials in various newspapers, including THE NEW YORK TIMES, and a letter from a Montreal citizen, expressing appreciation of THE TIMES editorial with regard to General Wood.

Calls It Cruel Humiliation.

"Oh, Mr. President," exclaimed Senator Johnson, "the cruelest thing in all this world is the humiliation of a brave spirit. If it were necessary to humiliate a brave spirit as Leonard Wood was humiliated, for the love of God ought not the people of the United States be told of it? I criticise no man; I am saying naught of hostility to any Administration; I recognize the right of the Commander in Chief to select whomsoever he pleases for official command; but there is one thing that the American people have a right to ask at this juncture, one thing that I have a right to ask and every other man has a right to ask whose blood is in France today, and that is, why do you keep out of the fighting line a man whom we believed to be a soldier of ability and intrepidity, a soldier who could render valiant service in this hour? In asking that, I do not ask that he be permitted to go; I do not ask that any decision be changed, but I say in this democracy of ours why should not the people be entitled to some explanation?

"And I say further, without the possibility of contradiction of the facts, that today there is not a Government upon the face of the earth that would treat its ranking Major General or its former ranking General in the fashion that General Wood was treated, without an explanation to its people.

"I reiterate that I am indulging in no hostile accusation or criticism. I ask, just as I have a right to ask, that when an extraordinary order of this kind is made, when a brave spirit is humbled at the very time that he expects to go across the water and fight for his nation, that there be forthcoming to the American people some kind of explanation."

Senator Johnson then turned to the recent order increasing railroad rates as a second example of the transmutation of the democracy.

"The other day the Director General of Railroads made an order increasing rates throughout this Union 25 per cent.," said he. "The order, I think, was improvidently made and possibly it may be corrected in some particulars. But imagine the extraordinary power of this particular act at this specific time. Necessary, you say, because of the war. Grant it. I am willing and glad to give any power that may come within shotgun distance of being necessary for the winning of the war, but that order destroyed a generation of work in the State from which I come. It is so improvidently made that it does not increase rates 25 per cent., but in many cases 100, 200, and, in some cases, 400 per cent.

"I cite this as another instance of the peculiar autocratic power that we have conveyed in the land. I do not object to the President of the United States, when he desires legislation, telling members of Congress what he wishes done, and endeavoring to do everything he can to pass that legislation. But I do object to the planting of the germ, the devitalizing germ of limitation in debate which will finally paralyze free action in this body.

Declares the Press is Cowed.

"You have a cowed press today, and you know it; you have a cowed people today, and you know it; you have a cowed Congress in great degree; but, thank God, there are men on this floor with ideals of democracy and passion for liberty who will stand when the day comes, notwithstanding a cowed press, a cowed people, or a cowed Congress—who will stand here and make that last fight for democracy and the return of our liberties.

"There is in the popular mind today something of contempt for this body. Not only is this contempt in the public mind, instilled as I believe insidiously in the past, but there is a contempt today which every Senator recognizes thinly veiled in nearly every department of the Government.

"But there is another day coming, and in transmuting our Government temporarily in the fashion we have done into an autocracy as powerful as any upon the face of this earth, there is no reason why any man of reason, of foresight, with an ounce of statesmanship, should not prepare against that day when it will be his duty and obligation to bring back this republic into its own, and make this Government as it has been in all the years of the past."

War Savings Receipts Lower.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—The Government harvest of war savings has decreased in the last three months, but officials count strongly on the saving pledge campaign ending June 28, Thrift Day, to raise revenues from this source above any past record. Treasury reports today showed that about $1,600,000 is now pouring into the Government coffers from war savings every day, as compared with daily returns of $1,900,000 in May, $2,000,000 in April, and $1,700,000 in March. Total receipts from war savings now amount to $268,000,000.

Cuts Chrome Imports to Save Ships.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—Under the general policy of tonnage conservation, the War Trade Board has introduced restrictions upon the importation of chrome ore and chromite from overseas, in a new ruling announced today. The sources of home supply are numerous and are believed to be capable of extensive development. To provide for demands pending the development of such deposits limited imports will be permitted.

MORRIS IN CAMP AGAIN.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 12.—Nelson Morris, the 36-year-old Chairman of the Board of Directors of Morris & Co., who left a $1 a year job at Washington to answer a draft call to Camp Grant and was again transferred to Washington, is serving as a soldier. He is stationed in a Quartermaster Corps unit at Camp Meigs, according to a dispatch from Washington.

That he was serving in this capacity after leaving Camp Grant, where he attained the rank of Sergeant, became known when Representative Dudley Doolittle of Kansas made a personal investigation of Morris's status as a soldier.

It was said in Chicago and Rockford, when Morris left Camp Grant, where he had a job serving soft drinks at a regimental canteen, that he was going to Washington as a "refrigeration expert" because of his knowledge of the packing business.

Allots Ships for Coffee Cargoes.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—The United States Shipping Board has allotted certain steamers, the names of which will be supplied to interested persons, for carrying coffee from Brazilian ports to New York only, for clearance in July and August, at the rate of $1.70 per bag. The space on these vessels will be allotted by the War Trade Board among importers.

LEAPS FROM TOMBS, FIGHTS FOR LIBERTY

COMPANION BREAKS LEG

Gaffney, Run Down by Police, Gets Away by More Leaps After a Struggle—Two Children Shot.

The most daring and successful escape in the history of the new Tombs Prison was effected yesterday afternoon by Vincent Gaffney, convicted of manslaughter and soon to be taken to Sing Sing Prison to serve a sentence of twenty years. He got out by a series of leaps that began at a window on the fifth floor of a wing and carried him from roof to roof of lower buildings for sixty feet to the top of the eighteen-foot guard wall on the Leonard Street side. From here he jumped to the street, making a total of seventy-eight feet in his flight for freedom.

A short-term convict, John Callahan, who attempted to follow Gaffney, broke his left leg in the first jump, and when he accomplished the second jump his fractured limb crumpled beneath him, and he was captured where he lay. Both men had plotted the escape on Tuesday, and their friends had arranged to have an automobile near by at the appointed time, which was to take place during the usual afternoon exercise period for the prisoners in the yard.

A car with two men in it speeded to Gaffney as he jumped into the street. The men dragged him into the car, which turned the corner and went swiftly up Centre Street. Two hours later detectives saw Gaffney in the car at Forty-seventh Street, east of Tenth Avenue, and, following an exchange of shots, a baby and a girl on the avenue were slightly wounded.

The car had apparently stalled just before the policemen got sight of it, but as they approached it began to move, and Detectives Flood and Whitney of the Second Branch Bureau opened fire. When shots came from the auto, followed by the screams of a girl, who dropped to the pavement, while a woman shouted that her baby had been hit by a bullet. The injured girl was Grace Lesire, 6 years old, of 440 West Forty-seventh Street, and a bullet had made a glancing out on her ankle. The baby, Thomas Lucas of 457 Boulevard, Long Island City, was shot while his mother was pushing him along in a carriage. His wound was found to be only a scratch on his foot. Both of the children were attended by Dr. O'Malley of Bellevue. The police say that the shots which hit the children were fired by Gaffney or by one of his companions in the car.

The car slowed down midway between Forty-seventh and Forty-sixth Streets on Tenth Avenue, where Gaffney leaped from it and dived into a door, with the detectives following and firing which sent hundreds of persons seeking cover for themselves. This neighborhood is Gaffney's old living place, and the district of the Gopher band, of which he is a member, and the fugitive knew where to go.

He got to the roof, jumped to several lower roofs, went down a rear flight of stairs and was seen by his pursuers climbing a fence to a yard through which he reached Forty-sixth Street. The detectives feared to make further use of their weapons here because of the crowds of dwellers, who swarmed in the yards through which the convict fled, and he again made good his escape.

Callahan, who was taken to the Tombs Hospital, made a confession to Warden John J. Hanley, who had started an investigation of the jail break. According to Callahan, who was a trusty and had access to all parts of the prison, he had procured a suit of khaki for Gaffney, who donned it when the prisoners were let out for exercise. Then Callahan went to the fifth floor of the wing in the centre of the jail court, where the kitchen is situated, and unscrewed the iron grill work in a window.

Gaffney, mistaken for a trusty with his khaki clothes, was not stopped when he moved from the yard to this building and ascended to the fifth floor. There were some 200 prisoners, including 90 Federal charges, and some 50 men serving terms for election frauds at the Republican primary, at exercise in the court in care of six keepers. Most of them saw Gaffney's first long leap. Then he turned his back to the crowd and leaped to a building at the rear of the big jail on Centre Street, which concealed him for a moment.

These jumps took him to and from the roof of the women's prison. From the extension of the latter he sprang fifteen feet more to a small house near the wall on the Leonard Street side, which is used as a visitors' room. He was over the wall and in the street before the keepers knew he had gone.

Gaffney had pleaded guilty to shooting and killing Charles Tucker in a feud near Tenth Avenue. He was in Sing Sing serving this sentence when it was discovered that through a technicality as to the expiration of his sentence it would be necessary to resentence him. He was brought here a few days ago to be arraigned before Judge Mulqueen as a second offender, which was not known when sentence was originally imposed. Callahan, under a six months' sentence, was wanted at Elmira for a broken parole.

WOULD LET SINNERS FIGHT.

Russellite Wants All "Consecrated Christians" Exempted.

Clayton J. Woodworth of Scranton, Penn., part author of "The Finished Mystery," was the principal witness yesterday at the trial of himself and eight other Russellites in the United States District Court in Brooklyn. His attention was called to a quotation which he caused to be placed in the book from a sermon by the Rev. John Haynes Holmes which reads:

"There is not a question raised, an issue involved, a course at stake (in the war) which is worth the life of one bluejacket on the sea or one khaki coat in the trenches."

Mr. Woodworth said it was from Dr. Holmes and he simply quoted from him, but admitted that he believed the quotation or he would not have incorporated it.

Special Prosecutor Isaac R. Oeland asked the witness about a part of the book in which Mr. Woodworth told of a minister dressed in army uniform and likened him to the bull at a slaughter house who led his fellows to death but evaded injury to himself, being trained to use a side door.

"I still believe it is a discredit for a minister to wear the uniform of the army and act as a decoy," Woodworth asserted, "and it is my belief that the ministers of the gospel in the aggregate are the greatest crowd of hypocrites that ever existed."

Woodworth said he was opposed to war and would not care to do military duty on the ground that he was a consecrated Christian. He said that among the Russellites those who did not become consecrated Christians were considered as sinners. He had no objection to sinners being called into service and losing their lives for their country.

"What do you think would become of the country if we all adopted your theories?" asked Judge Howe.

"If this people were wholly consecrated to the Lord the Lord would take care of them," replied Mr. Woodworth.

MAYORS PLEDGE CURB ON CITY BOND ISSUES

Special to The New York Times.

NEWBURG, N. Y., June 12.—Mayors of the cities of New York State, at their ninth annual conference today, went on record as pledging themselves to regard as a mandate the request of the Government that there should be no extraordinary expenditures for public improvements without the consent of the Government. The attitude of the Government is that the issue of municipal bonds should be curtailed during the war.

Mayor Hylan made a plea for municipal ownership. He said there was a wide and increasing demand for it; that experience had shown that lower rates and better service obtained where public utilities were governmentally controlled, and that experience had also proved that municipal ownership was attended with a great social gain represented by higher wages, a shorter workday, and more regular employment.

The Mayor expressed keen regret at the defeat of the Wagner-Donohue bill, which, he said, would have made municipal ownership possible for the cities of the State.

Officers were chosen as follows: President, Walter R. Stone of Syracuse; Vice President, James D. Smith of Utica; Treasurer, James R. Watt of Albany; Secretary, William P. Capes of Albany; Bureau Council, H. Clayton Midlam of Rome, Palmer Canfield, Jr., of Kingston, R. M. Cox of Middletown, Foster Studholm of Olean, and William J. Wallin of Yonkers.

The next conference will be held in Schenectady.

PRESIDENT OPPOSES PROHIBITION "RIDERS"

Objects to Amendments to Pending Bills, but Not to Any New Legislation.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—Although he does not object to Senators offering any separate prohibition legislation, President Wilson is opposed to attaching any prohibition amendments to pending appropriation bills.

It was learned today that the President not only opposes the Randall amendment to the Emergency Agricultural bill, which would prevent the expenditure of about $6,000,000, until he prohibits use of foodstuffs for the manufacture of beer and wine, but also opposes the "bone dry" prohibition provision, which Senator Jones of Washington has introduced. Senator Smith of South Carolina, Acting Chairman of the Agriculture Committee, has been asked to use his influence for elimination of all prohibition amendments.

To the introduction of prohibition bills as separate measures, to be fought out in both houses on their merits, the President, it is understood, has no objections.

GRADUATES HEAR COLONEL.

Roosevelt at Indiana University Assails Sinn Feiners.

Special to The New York Times.

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., June 12.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt addressed the graduating class of Indiana University at the annual commencement exercises held today with more than 8,000 present. He said in part:

"Friends, it is unpatriotic and un-American to damage America because you love another country, but there is one thing worse, and that is to damn America because you hate another country. The Sinn Feiner who acts against America because he hates England is a worse creature than the member of the German-American Alliance who has acted against America because he loves Germany.

"I want to point out the bit of etymological information—Sinn Fein means 'Us ourselves.' It means that those who adopt that name are fighting for themselves, for a certain division of people across the sea. Then what right have they to come here to America? Their very name shows that they are not American, that they are anti-American, that they are for themselves against America.

"I wish that we would begin to copy Germany in just one thing, and that is the way she deals with spies and alien enemies."

After the commencement exercises Mr. Roosevelt insisted on returning immediately to Indianapolis in order to get a rest before leaving for New York at 5:45 this evening.

BULGAR DEFEAT SEVERE.

Eastern Theatre, June 11.—There was sustained artillery activity on both sides west of the Vardar. The enemy attempted surprise attacks against our positions at Dubrudja and in the region west of Lake Ochrida, but these were repulsed.

The operation on June 10 against Mounts Kamia and Elnia enabled us to reduce the salient in the enemy lines. The region occupied by us gave us extended observation facilities and assured the covering of the positions newly conquered by our troops on the heights of Ovravuza.

This operation, despite the difficulties of the ground, which is very mountainous, presenting summits 2,000 meters in height, still covered with snow, met with vigorous opposition on the part of the enemy, whose resistance only met with defeat after continued hand-to-hand fighting. It was carried out with remarkable spirit by the French troops and Albanian contingents.

The number of prisoners taken exceeded 225. Ten cannon, including several mortars, and important war material also were captured.

OUR FLAG OVER H.M.S. EAGLE.

Ambassador Page's Wife Aids in British Launching.

LONDON, June 12.—Mrs. Walter H. Page, wife of the American Ambassador to Great Britain, named H. M. S. Eagle, one of Great Britain's largest naval ships, which was launched on the Tyne today.

The Royal Naval Ensign and the Stars and Stripes flew from the bow of the vessel. Admiral Lionel Halsey and many of Great Britain's leading naval officers were present.

Mexican Editors See Flying Field.

The visiting Mexican journalists who are touring the country under the auspices of the Committee on Public Information will be the guests of the Pan American Society at noon today at a luncheon to be held at the Bankers' Club, 120 Broadway. Yesterday the journalists visited the flying field at Mineola, and later were escorted through the printing plant of Doubleday, Page & Co. at Hempstead. They expressed delight with all they saw, and were impressed with the preparations for air combat which they witnessed at Mineola.

J. T. Grady Succeeds Prof. Matthews

Dr. Talcott Williams, director of the School of Journalism at Columbia University, announced yesterday the appointment of James T. Grady of The Tribune as Assistant Professor in Journalism. He takes the place of the late Professor Franklin Matthews. Mr. Grady has been telegraph editor and night city editor of The Tribune.

GERMANY PROTESTS PRAGER LYNCHING

America Has Been Asked for Safeguards Against Excesses, Simons Tells Reichstag.

SAYS HATRED WAS FANNED

Not Satisfied with Illinois' Responsibility — Washington Denies Receiving Complaint.

AMSTERDAM, June 12.—Germany has lodged a complaint in Washington and asked for safeguards against such excesses as led to the lynching of Robert P. Prager at Collinsville, Ill., on April 4, according to a Wolff Bureau telegram from Germany quoting Privy Councilor Simons in replying to a question asked by Herr Müller of Meiningen in the Reichstag. Privy Councilor Simons is quoted as follows:

"The lynching of Prager is a fact, and was committed for no other reason than that Prager was a German and sympathized with the German cause. The Swiss Minister at Washington has lodged a complaint and asked for safeguards against such excesses.

"The United States admits the facts, but says that, under the laws of Illinois, it cannot interfere. The investigation is proceeding and legal steps are being taken for the future.

"The United States, which is allegedly warring against the 'Huns' in the interests of humanity, bears the main responsibility for the crime. The American Government permitted hatred of Germans to be fanned among the American people. We cannot rest satisfied with the statement that the laws of Illinois are inadequate to handle such a situation. The American Government must find ways to protect the rights and liberties of Germans in America.

"The German Government has repeatedly made known, through the Swiss Minister, that progress in this matter should be accelerated, whatever the conditions in the United States may be. The United States Government must under all circumstances see that such things do not occur again."

Herr Müller said that a British paper had published a list of similar cases and the Privy Councilor replied:

"We are going into those cases, but we can deal only with those of German subjects."

WASHINGTON, June 12.—No complaint from Germany against the lynching of Prager has reached the State Department, and at the Swiss Legation, which has charge of German affairs in this country, it was said that nothing had been received on the case. Some time ago the Swiss Minister offered to pay Prager's funeral expenses, but the State Department established that he was acting for relatives and not for the German Government.

The Federal Government has no authority to proceed against the lynchers, but the Attorney General interested himself in the case. At the time officials pointed to the case as an example of what might be expected if laws were not passed to curb pro-German talk, and the affair hastened enactment of the Sedition bill then pending in Congress.

LIBELS SOLDIERS' WIVES.

German Trick to Undermine Morale of Fighters Is Foiled.

CHICAGO, June 12.—Insidious German propaganda designed to undermine the morale of soldiers by casting suspicion on the conduct of wives left behind has been uncovered here, it became known today.

Last Monday a well written letter purporting to come from a soldier whose wife, the letter said, had been insidiously lured to marital disloyalty, was received by the Clerk of the Morals Court, and it suggested that publicity was desired. It was a dramatic story, so well told that suspicions were aroused and investigation showed no trace of the "soldier" supposed to have written it in the hospital where worry over his wife's conduct had put him.

The pathetic appeal of the letter was such that had not the fraud been detected the story probably would have attained much publicity. It was declared, however, that early in the war German agents flooded the Italian army with letters telling soldiers that their wives were unfaithful.

Federal agents believe that the trick may be tried elsewhere and that undoubtdly German propaganda is trying to obtain a similar effect by other means.

FIND BABIES NEED FOOD.

Many Examined at Diet Kitchen Suffered from Malnutrition.

Of the sixty-six babies examined yesterday at the milk station of the New York Diet Kitchen Association, 437 West Forty-first Street, by Dr. Vincent W. Haight, more than 50 per cent., it was found, were suffering from malnutrition, and at least 50 per cent. had enlarged adenoids and tonsils. The examination was conducted in connection with the Federal Babies' Year Campaign, the object of which is to save the lives of 100,000 babies under the age of 5 in the United States.

To remedy the conditions found at the various examination centres a thorough canvass for the after care of the children has been planned, and the five extra nurses employed by the kitchen for the work of Babies' Year will begin tomorrow to take the children in groups to the clinic for treatment.

The task of making a census and examining New York's 600,000 children under 5 is shown by the estimates made that one visitor can reach about fifty children a day, and that one doctor can examine thirty babies a day.

ROUSE DOCTORS' WAR ZEAL.

Gorgas and Braisted Address Convention—Epidemic in France Denied

CHICAGO, June 12.—Medical celebrities attending the annual convention of the American Medical Association here united tonight in a program of war speeches in English and French that marked the high tide of enthusiasm for the allied cause at the meeting.

Surgeon General W. C. Gorgas of the army, Surgeon General W. C. Braisted of the navy, Sir James Mackenzie and Sir Arbuthnot Lane of Great Britain, Colonel Herbert Bruch of Canada, M. Justin Godart and Major Edouard Rist of France, Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, President of Stanford University, and Dr. Alexander Lambert of New York, Medical Director of the American Red Cross in France, were the speakers.

Reports that tuberculosis is ravaging France were denied by Dr. de Lille, who branded them as the product of German propaganda.

German Loan 15,001,425,000 Marks

AMSTERDAM, June 12.—Subscriptions from the army to the eighth German war loan brought the total of the loan up to 15,001,425,000 marks, according to Berlin dispatches today.

NEW MAIL FLIGHT RECORD.

Lieutenant Culver Makes Trip from Philadelphia in 42 Minutes.

The fastest time yet made over the air mail route from Philadelphia to Belmont Park was placed to the credit of Lieutenant Culver yesterday. Flying with seven sacks of mail, he made the trip in forty-two minutes. He also broke the air mail altitude record by rising to more than 20,000 feet on the trip.

Lieutenant Culver started from Philadelphia at 2:30 and reached here at 3:12. Considering the weight carried and the altitude attained, Culver's flight was thought remarkable by airmen. Starting his trip from Belmont Park at noon with a strong wind against him Lieutenant Culver ventured to a high altitude to ride the storm easily. He had with him two sacks of mail for Philadelphia and three for Washington.

As a precaution, in order to bring back the Philadelphia and Washington mail if any mishap should occur to Culver, Lieutenant Millar started out in a big plane with a Liberty motor. Lieutenant Millar had a little trouble with his motor and stopped on Staten Island to overcome it. Culver, in spite of his heavy mail, reached Philadelphia in good season.

Up to yesterday the speediest trip in the air mail service was made by Lieutenant Stephen Bonsal on May 23, in fifty minutes. On the first trip with the mails Lieutenant Torrey H. Webb made the flight to Philadelphia in one hour.

PAY FOR AETNA CREDITORS.

Full Settlement Offered Those Who Will Accept Liberty Bonds.

Creditors of the Aetna Explosives Company, whose claims are not disputed, are to receive another 25 per cent. cash payment, or payment in full if they accept the second issue of Liberty bonds. The claims amount to $827,196.56. Besides clearing away half of the accepted claims the receivers have invested $3,000,000 in Liberty bonds.

In making the order yesterday Federal Judge Mayer said that doubtless the creditors had already invested in Liberty bonds, but that they would be helping the Government and obtaining at the same time quick settlement of their claims if they would accept them. Those creditors who need the cash will receive half of the amount due and the remaining half as soon as the affairs of the company warrant the withdrawal of the necessary funds.

The only misfortune attending the receivership was the burning of the plant at Oakdale. It was insured for $500,250, but the maximum recovery was only $300,000. The court authorized the building of a plant on the same site for the manufacture of TNT at a cost of about $500,000. It was explained that the plant was needed to fill an order of the Government for 2,500,000 pounds of TNT a month.

SEEK U-BOAT BASES, MARCONI SUGGESTS

CALLS RAID A MERE BLUFF

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, June 12.—"What is necessary for America to do is to patrol and guard all the coast of the United States, Canada, Mexico, and also some of the Central American republics, to prevent the establishment of submarine bases there, or to destroy them if already existing," said Senator Marconi to THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent in the course of a conversation, adding:

"The sudden news of the sinking of American vessels off the American coast has filled most of us Italians with surprise, as the difficulty of carrying on such a campaign at so great a distance from home bases cannot be overestimated. The action is naturally foredoomed to failure, but is nevertheless interesting, as affording another illustration of the desire the Germans have of doing something spectacular at whatever cost to themselves, ruthlessly regardless of the suffering such action bring upon helpless innocent non-combatants.

"We have seen this same disire of theirs displayed throughout the war, typically exemplified by such incidents as the triumphal march through Brussels, the capital of the poor, helpless Belgians, whom they had first murdered by a traitorous blow in the back; such incidents as the continuance of air raids over undefended towns, long after experience has shown that this is a useless as well as a costly proceeding; the dispatching of commercial submarines to America, though they well knew such action was more than dangerous for the crews and couldn't possibly relieve the situation at home; the long range shelling of Paris, though they can hardly hope to obtain any material advantage by it. They are inflicting suffering on countless innocents. And lastly, they are undertaking this submarine campaign against America, though they must know that by so doing they are merely signing the death warrant of their crews.

Battle of Whale and Elephant.

"It has been said before this world conflagration that if England and Germany ever came to blows, it would be like a battle between a whale and an elephant. But in this war we have seen the curious spectacle of the English whale straining every sinew to become a successful elephant, while the German elephant made great efforts to become a successful whale. This new outburst marks a new milestone in this German effort.

"Happily, events have shown that it is apparently easier for a whale to change into an elephant than for an elephant to change into a whale.

"During my visit to America I formed such a high opinion of the determination and ability of the Americans that I feel sure they will rapidly develop means to cope successfully with submarines in American waters. In America, in spite of special features, as, for instance, the greater length of sea border to guard, the task of ridding the sea of these ought, nevertheless, not to present any insurmountable difficulties; so that we may soon look forward to a complete cessation of any further attempts of the sort on the part of Germany.

"This raid has no military or political value, but is probably a mere bluff to terrorize the American population. I am glad to see by comments published in your paper that the people in authority in Washington understood the ruse which was to induce the United States to withdraw ships from European waters to guard her own coast. But clearsighted, intelligent men are guiding the destinies of the American nation, and they have not been caught in the trap.

Admiration In Italy.

Every Italian is filled with admiration of the gigantic task accomplished by the American Navy in transporting hundreds of thousands of men and war material with a minimum loss across the 3,000 miles of water under constant threat of enemy submarines. This demonstrates the admirably perfect organization of the American Navy, the untiring devotion of the men who man the ships, and its superiority over the enemy.

"I am glad to have an opportunity of expressing to my friends in America my personal feelings and those of all my compatriots with regard to the magnificent spirit and courage displayed by the American troops in France. Their initiative and dash prevented the German front from crossing the Marne, thus protecting the road leading to Paris, which, as a French paper rightly declared, has now become the capital of all the allied countries, and must be defended with the last drop of our blood."

RAIDER DESTROYS TWO MORE SHIPS

The sinking of these two Norwegian vessels brings the total number of ships known to have been attacked off the American coast since May 25 up to 18. Among them were two other Norwegian steamships, the Viniand and the Eidsvold, both sunk off the Virginia Capes on June 4.

The Vindeggen was a single-screw steamship of 2,632 gross tonnage, and was built at New Castle, England, in 1895. She was 302 feet long and 42 feet beam. The Henrik Lund was of 4,322 gross tonnage, was built at Sunderland, England, in 1906, and was 346 feet long and 49 feet 10 inches beam. She was owned by W. Gilbert of Bergen, Norway, and was bound from Norfolk for New York.

Navy men who were seen last night said it was apparent that the U-boat intended to start for home shortly or she would not have taken the eighty tons of copper on board. They also said that it was evident the German commander had been instructed to attack unarmed vessels off the American coast and look them so as to cause a sensation on shore.

DEMANDS SHIP FOR SHIP.

Britain Encourages Sea Indemnity Move, Says Maryon-Wilson.

LONDON, June 12.—The Imperial Maritime League, according to a statement made at a general meeting of the league by the acting Chairman, Sir Spencer Maryon-Wilson, has carried on a campaign in all leading seaport towns of the United Kingdom with the object of putting before the British public the vital importance of incorporating in future peace terms the condition that the enemy powers should surrender an amount of mercantile tonnage at least equivalent to that of the Allies sunk by the enemy during the war.

This object, he said, had been attained by assurances given by the Government.

Washington's Report of the Sinking at Variance with Accounts Given Here.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—That German submarines were still operating along the Atlantic coast as recently as the late afternoon of Monday was officially admitted this evening when the Navy Department announced that the Norwegian steamer Henrik Lund was sunk by an enemy submarine 120 miles east of Cape Hatteras on June 10. At the same time it was announced that the Norwegian steamer Vindeggen was sunk on the afternoon of June 8 in the same vicinity. The official announcement follows:

"The Navy Department is informed that the steamship Borsund arrived at New York at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon with survivors from the Norwegian steamers Vindeggen and Henrik Lund, sunk by submarine about 120 miles east of Hatteras. The Vindeggen, according to reports, was sunk at 5:30 P. M., on June 8; the Henrik Lund at 6:17 P. M., on June 10."

[This announcement does not agree in several particulars with the account of the sinkings obtained from the survivors on their arrival in New York. According to their accounts both ships were sunk on Monday.]

The last previously reported sinking was that of the American steamship Pinar del Rio off the Maryland coast on the morning of June 8. As the Pinar del Rio was sunk off the Maryland coast on the morning of the same day that the Vindeggen, according to the report here, was sunk 120 miles off the Hatteras coast, and it is not believed that the same submarine could have covered the distance between the two points the same day, there is every probability that the Pinar del Rio and the Vindeggen were sunk by different submarines. This would mean that as late as June 8 not less than two German submarines were active along the coast. After these two sinkings two days elapsed between the sinking of the Vindeggen and the Henrik Lund.

In view of the discrepancies in the Navy Department's announcement and the newspaper accounts of stories told by survivors, the department late tonight undertook an inquiry to ascertain which account was correct. It was said by the Navy Censor that the information contained in the bulletin issued by the department was all that the department had received, and that the bulletin correctly represented what had been communicated to the department was verified by an examination.

The discrepancy between the Navy Department account and the press account as to the place where the sinkings occurred might possibly be explained, it was said, by the fact that the distance of 120 miles from Cape Hatteras, given in the Navy Department bulletin, and the distance from Cape Charles given by survivors to newspapers were approximately in the same vicinity. In one the distance from Cape Hatteras was taken to describe the location, while in the other the distance from Cape Charles was taken.

High officials of the navy today refused to confirm persistent reports that there had been encounters between American patrol vessels and submarines. When the attention of one high official was called to a widely published story of an encounter between a submarine and one of the patrol vessels, he remarked that "that's an old story," but when told that, if old, there had been no official announcement, he declined to make further statement.

It is believed that the department has received reports of encounters between naval vessels and submarines, and that it is withholding the facts from the public for some unexplained reason.

Just why there should be any withholding of the facts is a mystery, especially in view of the previous assurances by high naval officials that the capture or sinking of a submarine in this campaign would not be withheld.

In the case of the Viniand, which was sunk on June 5, the announcement was not made until late at night, despite the fact that the report was current in Navy Department corridors early that day, and the reported sinking of the Viniand had been announced in widespread publication throughout the country. Why there should have been a delay of many hours in making this announcement is also a mystery.

The Shipping Board today announced that the sinkings of American vessels by submarines since May 25 along the Atlantic coast had been exceeded by new production of ships in this country by more than 100,000 tons. The announcement follows:

"Statistics compiled by the Shipping Board today show that since the German submarines began their raids off the Atlantic Coast on May 25 the output of shipyards building for the Shipping Board has exceeded the sinkings of American vessels by more than 100,000 dead weight tons.

"The production for the Shipping Board during this interval has been 21 vessels, totalling 130,642 tons. Excluding the vessels salvaged, the submarines have to date destroyed 10 American vessels, totalling 26,000 tons.

"Here are the ships that have been completed for the Shipping Board since May 25:

Lake Sebago, cargo, 2,880 tons, Toledo Shipbuilding Company, Toledo, Ohio; Lake Lida, cargo, 3,500 tons, Manitowoc Shipbuilding Company, Manitowoc, Wis.; Gulfland, tanker, 7,300 tons, New York Shipbuilding Company, Camden, N. "Of this number six were completed during the week ending June 8. Four were requisitioned, two contract. They totalled 24,430 tons. In the same period there were fourteen launchings, seven of steel and seven of wood, totalling 75,470 tons.

"The requisitioned steel vessels launched were:

Lake Winico, cargo 3,100 tons, American Shipbuilding Company, Lorain, Ohio; Boatwick, cargo 11,726 tons, Harlan & Hollingsworth, Wilmington, Del.; Montrolite, cargo 9,000 tons, Ames Shipbuilding Company, Seattle.

"Contract steel vessels launched:

"Lake Blanchester, cargo, 3,550 tons, American Shipbuilding Company, Lorain, Ohio; West Cohas, cargo, 8,800 tons, Skinner & Eddy Corporation, Seattle; Isanti, cargo, 8,800 tons, West Pipe and Steel Company; Osankee, cargo, 8,800 tons, Long Beach Shipbuilding Company, Long Beach, Cal. ESCAPES SUBMARINE AFTER A HOT PURSUIT

Special to The New York Times.

NORFOLK, Va., June 12.—Only skillful navigation, the obscurity of a partly clouded night, and ability to show a clean pair of heels saved the American steamship Edward Pierce from falling a prey to a German U-boat off the Virginia Capes early Tuesday morning, according to the statement of Captain Wade, her commander, on visiting Norfolk today. For two hours the Pierce was chased, subject to shell fire, endangered by at least two torpedoes, and no one capable of rendering aid responded to her wireless calls for assistance, the skipper asserted.

The Pierce was picked up in the early hours of the morning by a big submersible sixty miles out from Cape Henry. The flash of a five-inch gun and the singing of a shell across her bow was the first warning to Captain Wade. The U-boat appeared 1,000 yards astern.

"I immediately decided to run for it," the Captain said, "ordered full steam ahead and personally directed a zigzag course."

He declared the U-boat trailed him for two hours, throwing a dozen shells at the Pierce, all of which missed the mark. Two torpedoes were finally launched, but these missed the Pierce, one clearing the ship by only a few yards. Not until the lights of Cape Henry were picked up did the sea wolf abandon the chase. Time after time shells flew dangerously close to the Pierce.

Captain Wade said he kept his wireless operator busy sending out S O S calls for assistance, expecting every moment that a shell would find its target. He received only two answers, one from a station at Cape Sable in Nova Scotia, and one from the steamer Walter D. Noyes, which reported that she was being chased by a U-boat. Both vessels reached port safely. Neither ship is armed. Captain Wade declared he gradually outdistanced the U-boat and that her gunners were handicapped by poor light.

Avoid Having Your Telephone Moved Unless it is Absolutely Necessary

DURING AN AVERAGE MONTH we move approximately 13,000 telephones from one point to another within a building or from one point to another within a room.

ONE THOUSAND, ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY-THREE MEN of our Plant Department, formerly engaged in installing and moving telephones and work incidental thereto, are now in the military service of our country and others are constantly being called to the colors.

UNDER THESE CONDITIONS the employees, who must remain at their posts are rendering a patriotic service of great importance in handling the increasing demands for war-time service.

IT IS IMPERATIVE, therefore, during the period of the war, that all unnecessary moving of telephones from one point to another within buildings or within offices, be avoided.

BEFORE YOU REQUEST that your telephone be moved, will you please consider whether it cannot be left in its present location without material inconvenience to you.

YOU CAN HELP to conserve labor for the all-important work of furnishing telephone service for the Government and essential war industries, if you will

"Don't worry about "substitute" stenographers

Vacation time is looming up. Usually that means strange faces trying to handle strange jobs—never a good or satisfactory combination.

This summer your problem is multiplied. You are short of regular help—it looks impossible to get good substitutes to fill in. And you are using the shorthand system to boot.

Right you are. If The Ediphone were on duty in your office all the time you would not be wrinkling your brow on "what to do."

You would be right side up because you would be able to handle your correspondence efficiently and economically right through the summer. That's a plain truth you will discover as soon as you know The Ediphone.

© Underwood & Underwood

Remaking the physique of the nation

In the last twelve months, 1,500,000 men have quit their jobs and gone into training camps.

This is just the beginning. The draft bill places 10,000,000 men—40% of the male working population—on the list available for military service.

These men represent the pick, the physically fit, of the nation, yet in the training camps they are being remoulded completely. They are being raised to higher standards of physical perfection.

The army recognizes that whatever work there is to be done, a man must be in the best physical condition. Whether it is in an outpost of the trenches or at a desk in the Quartermaster's Department, strength, nerve, and endurance are necessary. All the men, therefore, must go through the same vigorous physical training in camp.

The energy and driving power of the army depends upon the stamina of each individual. The same is true in industry. Gradually we are coming to realize the fact. Army and Navy standards of health, character and personal efficiency will prevail in industry after the war.

It is up to every man not in service to live up to the new war standards of efficiency. He can do this only by living up to the new physical standards.

A man does not have to be in an army camp to get sufficiently fit for his daily office work. He can do much by himself toward the improvement of his health. There is no better exercise for the business man than walking.

But the most important factor in building up health, is the conservation of your energy.

Most of the fatigue we suffer, and the personal inefficiency we blame ourselves for, result from ignorance of how to conserve energy. The average man wastes energy in thousands of different ways.

One of the biggest wastes arises from the fact that he doesn't fully realize he is in the 20th Century—the Age of Concrete, the age of hard stone pavements and tile floors. Every step on hard pavements means a useless jar and jolt to your spine. This is fatiguing. Fatigue eats up strength.

The combination of hard leather heels on hard unyielding pavements not only discourages the average man from walking for wholesome exercise, but to those who must be on their feet all day, it works an actual harm.

Besides jarring the spine and tiring out the nervous system, hard pavements and hard heels are one of the most frequent causes of flatfoot, a malady which has disqualified thousands of men from the Army and Navy.

Leather heels are no more suited to hard pavements than the sandals of ancient days. They are utterly out of keeping with the new standards of health and efficiency. As long as you continue to wear them, your physique suffers accordingly.

The heels best suited for city wear

Because of our special process, O'Sullivan's Heels combine the greatest durability with the greatest resiliency. They are made of perfect heel material.

Buy your new shoes with O'Sullivan's Heel already attached. Good dealers sell the latest style shoes with these heels already attached Have O'Sullivan's put on all your shoes at once. Every day you delay putting them on you are wasting your most valuable asset—Energy.

BURNS HITS MIGHTY BLOW

Crashes Ball to Fence in First Frame for Home Run, Which Proves Fatal to the Green Sox.

Pol Perritt brought the Chicago Cubs to an abrupt stop at the Polo Grounds yesterday and halted them after nine straight victories. Nine straight seems to be the traffic rule in the National League this season, for twice the Giants have won nine straight and the Cubs have done the same thing. While Perritt's pitching was keeping the Green Sox in their place, Georgie Burns injected a home run into the afternoon's diversion, and it was by the margin of that home run that the Giants speared the pastime 1 to 0.

The home run which brought the Giants back to life came with two out in the first inning. Burns leaned against one of Lefty Tyler's fancy flings and pumped a terrific liner to right centre field. Both Paskert and Flack scampered after the ball as it rolled toward the fence. In this exciting race to the fence the ball finished first, Flack second and Paskert was third.

Just as the ball was about to flirt with the fence, Flack made a grab for it, but slipped in the mud and sat down suddenly. All this time George Burns was making tracks around the muddy base paths. Great hunks of mud were flying up from his spikes as he tore around the bases. Burns hasn't run quite as fast as he did yesterday since he hustled to catch the train out of Utica to come to New York.

McGraw Hustles Burns On.

Manager McGraw was coaching at third, and when he saw Flack do an Annette Kellermann in the mud, he spread the news to the onrushing Burns and advised him to throw in the high, and that is just exactly what Burnsie did. He crossed the plate before the ball got back as far as second base.

The horse now being stolen, Lefty Tyler locked up the barn door and after that the Giants were helpless before his fork-hand pitching. Fletcher, the first Giant up in the second inning, singled to centre, but not a New York batsman made a hit after that.

Pol Perritt was constantly in trouble, but he got himself out of the clutches of adversity with the skill of Houdini. The Green Sox slapped him for half a dozen hits, three of these being made by Leslie Mann, one a two-bagger. In four different innings the first Cub batsman up got on first and two of them got within a sixteenth of an inch of the plate.

Cubs Threaten Again.

The Cubs again threatened Perritt seriously in the fourth. Mann poled a two-bagger to right and went to third when Fred Merkle laid down a sacrifice. Paskert whacked a bouncer at Fletcher, and the Giants' Captain soaked the ball into the plate in time to get Mann trying to score. Mann and McCarty got their legs all tangled up during the collision, and Umpire Bill Klem had to use a shoehorn to pry them apart.

There was a peculiar play in the first inning, during which it took the united services of the entire Giant infield to get Hollocher out. With one out, the Cub shortstop laid a bunch on and Holke several steps to the right of first base. Perritt ran over to cover first base on the play, but Holke tossed the ball high over his head. McCarty backed up the play, however, and captured the truant ball as Hollocher cut for second. Holke, Fletcher, Rodriguez, McCarty, and Perritt all played a game of tag with the runner before he was finally trapped.

The work of Perritt with runners aboard the bases was as fine a bit of pitching as has been done at the Polo Grounds this season. When danger threatened Perritt closed up tight and cut the corners with elusive benders, which bobbed playfully around the Chicago bats.

Bat and Ball Fund Will Receive Part of Today's Receipts.

All the arrangements for the celebration of Bat and Ball Fund Day at Ebbets Field, which has now been twice postponed because of unfavorable weather, which prevented the opening game of the series between the Robins and Christy Mathewson's Cincinnati Redlegs, will be observed this afternoon if the weather man is considerate. The two clubs have agreed to give 25 per cent. of the receipts to Clark Griffith's fund, and in addition there will be a return from school children of Brooklyn, who will be admitted to seats in the grand stand back of third base for the nominal charge of 10 cents. Nine cents of this will go to the Bat and Ball Fund and the remaining one cent to the Government as a war tax.

President Charles H. Ebbets last night announced that Manager Robinson was seriously considering using either Clarence Mitchell, obtained from Cincinnati by the waiver route, or Chuck Ward, the twirler acquired from Pittsburgh in one of last Winter's deals, for the pitching task. It is even possible that they both may work during the game. Mitchell and Ward are now stationed at Camp Mills with the 342d Artillery and are on furlough. They will both receive complete baseball outfits for their comrades before the game starts. Twenty-eight other complete outfits of baseball paraphernalia will be distributed to representatives of various other nearby camps before game time.

FILLINGIM'S CUP IS FULL.

BOSTON, June 12.—Fillingim pitched Boston to a 1 to 0 victory over Pittsburgh this afternoon, holding the visitors to three hits. He received remarkable support by Herzog, Rehg, and Powell.

A base on balls to Rawlings in the first inning, Herzog's sacrifice, and Powell's single scored the only run. Boston jumped to fourth position in the league standing as a result of the victory.

MACKMEN WIN IN NINTH.

DETROIT, Mich., June 12.—A three-base hit by Shannon and a single by Gregg in the ninth inning gave Philadelphia a 4 to 3 victory over Detroit today. The fielding of Dugan and Gardner was noteworthy.

Dugan prevented a possible tie when with a man on base he leaped into the air and ended the game by catching Hielman's drive.

YANKS AGAIN FALL PREY TO INDIANS

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, June 12.—The Yankees came dangerously close to a drop into third place this afternoon when they lost their second straight game to the Indians, the defeat of the White Sox at Chicago alone saving the Huggins boys. Hard hitting in the early innings, while Allen Russell occupied the mound, gave the home team a lead which it held to the close, despite the strong finish of the New Yorkers. The score was 7 to 5 and the defeat was the third in succession for the Yankees.

Huggins's men threw another big scare into the home team in the ninth, but unlike yesterday's rally this one fell just short of tying the score. Two runs were needed to overhaul the Indians, and the Yanks had two runners on the sacks when Speaker galloped over into right centre with two out and grabbed Peck's long fly.

Huggins found it very convenient to change pitchers before the game reached the half-way mark, as Russell was both wild and ineffective. Slim Love was summoned to what appeared to be a lost cause, and pitched fine ball from the fourth inning to the finish. The Indians collected only one run that could be charged to the lanky lefthander. There was a fluke triple mixed in, as Gilhooley's attempt at a shoestring catch of Evans's hit in the sixth let an ordinary single get away for a triple.

Morton's great speed had the Yankees bewildered in the early innings and up to the sixth only two of the visitors got as far as second base. From the sixth to the finish the New Yorkers made things very interesting and gradually cut down the big Cleveland lead only to fall short in the ninth. They were helped along, too, in their scoring by errors on the part of Evans and Wamby.

The Indians got three hits and a run in the first frame, Speaker counting on his hit, a fielder's choice, and Roth's triple to right. In the second a pass to Wood was followed by Miller's double and a long fly to centre by Thomas, another run coming over. In the third Evans worked Russell for a pass to start the inning, and completed the circuit on a sacrifice by Chapman and a double to left by Speaker.

Russell faded out in the fourth in a rally which produced three runs. Miller started with a double, Thomas got a single and Morton was an easy out at first. The squeeze play turned out better than expected, as Evans scored Miller with his bunt to Pipp and then outran the latter's throw to Pratt. Russell could not get the ball over for Chapman, so Huggins took him out and sent Love in with the bases filled and Speaker at the plate. This hit to Peck for a force play at the plate on Thomas and both followed with a single on which Evans and Chapman scored.

In the Yankees' sixth Gilhooley lined to the fence in right centre for a triple and scored while Chapman was throwing Peck out. The last Cleveland run came in the sixth on Evans's "fluke" triple and a single by Speaker.

Evans mussed up Bodie's grounder to start the Yanks' seventh, and Marsans followed with a triple to left, scoring. Marsans raced in on Walters's sacrifice fly to Speaker. In the ninth hits by Pipp and Bodie and an error by Wamby filled the bases with none out. Walters forced Marsans, Pipp scoring, and Caldwell sent Bodie across with a fly to Speaker. Gilhooley got a single and Peck ended the game with a fly to Speaker.

SENATORS END WITH RUSH.

ST. LOUIS, June 12.—After blanking Washington for eight innings Shocker weakened in the ninth and the visitors pounded his offerings to all corners of the park, winning from St. Louis, 6 to 4.

The victory put Washington in fifth place. Stanley Reese, purchased from the St. Louis Nationals yesterday by Manager Griffith, gets credit for the victory.

HANNIBAL GALLOPS HOME FAR IN VAN

Richard T. Wilson, Jr.'s, long streak of ill luck turned yesterday at Belmont Park when his homebred colt, Hannibal, galloped home an easy winner of the Keene Memorial Stakes, one of the most important of the newer fixtures for juveniles. The son of Olambala had disappointed his owner by failing to keep pace with the fleet Elfin Queen in the Juvenile Stakes and also when he finished second to Harry Payne Whitney's Blue Laddie, but his private trials had been so impressive that he was a strong choice for yesterday's big event.

He more than justified the support accorded him, for he led the procession of smart youngsters from start to finish, and as he breezed past the judges he had ten lengths to spare over Walter M. Jefforda's Star Hampton, which as the winner of the Colorado Stakes at Jamaica had been reckoned one of the chief contenders of the Wilson colt. John E. Madden added The Trump at the last minute, and this late comer dropped into third place five lengths behind Star Hampton. The time of the race, 1:05, was good considering the muddy track over which it was run.

The great disappointment of the race was P. Housman's Aunt Dinah, a filly that has been racing with great success, but which had to put up with fourth place four lengths behind The Trump and only a neck in front of R. H. McCarter Potter's Blairgowrie. In the paddock it was noticed that Aunt Dinah looked drawn. She did not compare with many of the others in the matter of condition.

The running of the stake did not attract as large a crowd as usual, but most of the leaders of the sport were present. A notable figure was Foxhall P. Keene, who made his first appearance of the season to see the race run that was instituted in memory of his father, the late James R. Keene.

A remarkable feature was that all three of the placed horses were bred by the men whose colors they carried. Blairgowrie, the second horse, being by Mr. Potter's old stallion Knight of the Thistle, while John E. Madden's The Trump is by Ormondale, out of his mare American Girl.

Except for the first quarter of a mile, in which Star Hampton, with his ten pounds extra to carry, held fairly close to the winner, Hannibal was in command of the situation. At half distance of the five and a half furlongs Hannibal held a lead of five lengths. He reveled in the mud, and swept away from the others as though they were anchored. Star Hampton held the place almost as easily, but A. Collins had to ride The Trump hard before he could draw away from the rest of the field.

Two races with only three starters in each made the picking of winners easier than usual, and the result was that five of the favorites were successful. The only exception was in the last race, when W. S. Coe's Under Fire, an evenmoney choice, was beaten by G. W. Loft's Fleeing Sheik and Mrs. Walter M. Jefford's Kerensky.

Before the running of the Keene Memorial there was a favorable augury for Mr. Wilson, as his imported Corn Tassel had little difficulty in defeating Red Sox and Panaman in the Centreport Handicap at a mile. The steeplechase resulted in a popular victory for the Greentree Stable's Syosset, which carried top weight, and won by three lengths from W. Smith's New Haven.

BRAVES GET SCOTT PERRY.

National Commission Decides Moot Case Against Athletics.

Scott Perry, the Atlanta pitcher, who has been doing good work for the Athletics, was awarded to the Boston Braves yesterday by the National Commission. Perry's case has been under discussion for some time. Last season Perry was taken over by the Boston Nationals for a thirty day trial and reported on June 1. He deserted the Boston Club on June 17. The Boston Club had paid the first installment of $500 for Perry's services.

When he left the Boston Club the commission ruled that if the player should return to organized baseball the Boston Club's rights would be recognized and the Braves could pay the balance of the "$2,000 price and acquire full rights to his services.

The Atlanta Club still carried Perry on its reserve list this Spring, and he was released to the Athletics early in April. The commission now rules that the Boston Club's right to the player must be recognized, and he must report to the Braves. The transfer of Perry from Atlanta to Connie Mack's club is declared null and void.

EMERSON GAINS LAURELS.

The outstanding feature of the continuation of play in the Jersey State tennis championship on the courts of the Montclair Athletic Club yesterday was the second round match between Gerald Emerson and A. G. Bragnaw. The latter, an experienced player, was defeated in two spirited sets by his younger rival, the score being 9—7, 9—7.

The summaries:

Second Round.—Henry Leverick defeated K. S. Johnson, 6—3, 6—2; L. M. Wood defeated L. S. Hobble, 5—7, 6—3, 6—2; Gerald Emerson defeated A. G. Bragaw, 9—7, 9—7; R. G. Scott defeated G. F. Hayden, 6—2, 4—6, 6—3; W. McBurney defeated H. M. Balch, 6—3, 6—4.
Doubles.—First Round—F. B. Hague and G. W. French defeated Anderson and Elmdorf, 6—3, 5—7, 6—1; Brown and Wood defeated Rutan and Tucker, 6—2; 6—3; Bennett and Balch defeated Colby and Arnold, 8—6, 6—2.

FAIL TO FILL JURY TO TRY J. J. O'LEARY

Lawyers Carefully Examine All Candidates as to Sinn Fein or Irish Leanings.

MENTION COHALAN'S NAME

The trial of John J. O'Leary, indicted on the charge of entering into a conspiracy to aid his brother, Jeremiah A. O'Leary, the fugitive Sinn Fein agitator, to escape from the jurisdiction of the American courts, began before Judge Augustus N. Hand in the Federal District Court yesterday morning. Thomas B. Felder appeared as counsel for O'Leary, and Assistant U. S. District Attorney Earl B. Barnes was in charge of the case for the Government.

The entire day was used in an unsuccessful effort to get a jury, and when court adjourned at 4 o'clock the indications were that the jury might not be completed before tomorrow morning. Every veniremen called was subjected to a long cross-examination by counsel for O'Leary and by Mr. Barnes. Mr. Barnes was particularly careful to ascertain whether or not the talesmen were Sinn Fein sympathizers or whether or not they numbered among their friends persons prominent in the Irish movement.

Alexis B. Blatchford, an insurance agent of 108 Broadway, was the first talesmen called. Mr. Blatchford was born in Pittsburgh, and lives in the Bronx. He told Colonel Felder he had read about the case of Jeremiah and John O'Leary, but that he was certain he could render a fair and impartial verdict.

Mr. Barnes asked questions which indicated the line of policy which the Government will follow in the case.

"Have you ever read the publication which was known as Bull, and of which Jeremiah A. O'Leary was the editor?" Mr. Barnes asked.

"No, I never read The Bull," he replied.

"No."

"Do you know Supreme Court Justice Daniel F. Cohalan?"

"I have met him socially."

"Do you belong to the Sinn Fein organization?"

"I do not."

"Do you belong to the Friends of Irish Freedom?"

"No, I do not."

"Are you opposed to the selective draft law of the United States?"

"I am not."

"Do you favor the prosecution of the war to a successful conclusion by the United States?"

"I do."

Other prospective jurors examined yesterday included Joseph A. Jordan, a real estate broker; Isaac Anderson, and Jefferson Blumenthal. All of these men were accepted tentatively, but are subject to peremptory challenge by either side.

Raymond R. Minor, a Confederate veteran, who has a son fighting in the 165th Infantry of the Rainbow Division, was questioned for an hour. Mr. Minor is somewhat deaf, and Mr. Barnes wanted him excused on that ground, but Mr. Felder objected. Judge Hand subjected him to some tests, decided he could hear well enough, and declined to excuse him. When asked how he would deal with the defendant if the evidence did not show him guilty beyond a reasonable doubt, Mr. Minor said:

"Well, I'd deal with him just like I done with a nigger once down in Virginia while I was on the jury. All the rest of the jury thought he was guilty and said so. I thought he was guilty myself, but the evidence wasn't enough for me, so I refused to convict him. He was accused of stealing some bacon."

Frederick J. Wood, a real estate dealer of 4,220 Third Avenue, of English parents, said he had a soft spot for the Irish. He felt that his liking for Irish would incline him to O'Leary's side and was excused.

The trial will be resumed at 10 o'clock this morning.

HONOR COLUMBIA ATHLETES

At a meeting of the Columbia Committee on Athletics held last night thirty-four members of the various major sports teams were awarded their 'Varsity letters. Insignia were also granted to the members of the championship golf team and to the tennis team.

Continuing the policy adopted early in the season of awarding insignia to men who would have received them had they remained at college, 'Varsity letters were granted to S. G. Mudd, manager of the football team, who is now in the navy; J. A. Schmeizel, manager of the track team, who is now enrolled in the army, and to E. Courtenay, who is enlisted in the aviation service and would have been manager of the baseball team if he had returned.

The awards follow:

BASEBALL—"C."—H. J. Buonoguro, Captain; J. Hauch, J. Ackerman, J. Houlahan, A. Goodman, M. J. Clark, T. J. Farrell, H. A. Koenig, J. Carroll, L. Lester, P. E. Uris, and S. Wienstein. "C. B. B."—W. Oberwetter and A. Stickel.

TRACK—"C."—H. A. Staub, H. Schulte, R. F. Shepard, C. Shaw, H. G. Larsen, and A. Turner. "Ct."—A. L. Huelsenbeck, Captain; L. Wettele, E. L. Taylor, F. Herty, G. King, E. Littauer, C. Sarlin, and H. C. Ashe.

CROSS-COUNTRY—"C."—J. P. Knox.

CREW—"C." with Crossed Oars.—R. Stiensohneiden, J. L. Kraus, J. Farkes, R. A. Wormser, R. Hawkins, E. A. Taylor, P. W. Gallieb, W. B. Brown, L. J. Work, D. J. Owen, and W. Neale, coxswain; J. D. Baker, manager. "C. R. C."—C. W. Seacke, Captain; F. B. Kindleberger, V. Schactel, A. Knodel, W. J. Neuman, R. L. Aebil, A. Waldecker, and W. A. Ford, coxswain.

TENNIS—"Ct."—A. von Bernuth, Captain; H. Forster, W. Botsford, W. Feistiner, H. W. Heidenstein, and F. R. Toombs, manager.

GOLF—"Ct."—A. L. Walker, J. Bijur, E. L. Rhodenberg, and J. E. Ward.

MANAGERS—"C."—S. G. Mudd, football; J. A. Schmeizel, track; E. Courtenay, baseball.

A. L. Huelsenbeck, Captain of the Columbia track team for the past season, and H. Staub, Captain-elect of the team, have just enlisted in the navy. The election of a Captain seems only a formality, for it does not seem as if any of the Morningside athletic leaders would return next Fall.

M. Buonoguro, who is a medical student, is to be enrolled in the enlisted Medical Reserve next week, on the completion of his junior year. W. B. Brown, Captain-elect of the crew, has applied for admission to the navy, but so far his application has been held up, owing to some slight defect in his sight.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

The opening of the "Follies" at the New Amsterdam has been postponed from Monday of next week to Tuesday. Bert Williams will not be in the cast.

Don Barclay will make his first appearance in the Century Grove midnight revue on Saturday night.

"The Blue Pearl," a new comedy by Anne Crawford Flexner, will be tried out by a stock company at the Newark Theatre, Newark, next week. Alma Tell and Earl Fox will head the cast.

O. S. STRAUS WILLING TO SERVE IN CONGRESS

Chairman of Service Board Will Be Candidate if Nominated by Both Parties.

Oscar S. Straus, who last week sent Governor Whitman his resignation as Chairman of the Public Service Commission and asked to be relieved from duty not later than July 1, announced yesterday that he would offer himself as a candidate for Congress this Fall, provided he could be assured of both the Democratic and Republican nomination from some district. Mr. Straus, now a Republican, followed Colonel Roosevelt into the Progressive Party, and at one time was the candidate for Governor of that party.

Mr. Straus said yesterday he wished to go to Congress to aid in the solution of problems which would arise during the reconstruction period which must follow the war. Mr. Straus, who once represented this country at The Hague tribunal, has been Ambassador to Turkey, and while Colonel Roosevelt was President sat in his Cabinet as the first head of the Department of Labor and Commerce.

In announcing his retirement from the Public Service Commission Mr. Straus explained that his work had been accomplished and he wanted to seek another and more congenial field of activity. He became Chairman of the commission on Dec. 20, 1915, succeeding J. Sergeant Cram. He refused to accept the place for the full five-year term, and it was understood that he would retire at the expiration of two years, but Governor Whitman prevailed upon him to remain.

BARS SPECULATION IN SHIPBUILDING

Hurley Asks for a Law to Prevent the Extension of Private Interests.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—Congress was asked by the Shipping Board today to tighten the grasp of the Government upon the country's shipbuilding industry by legislation forbidding the building of new plants or the extension of old ones except under license.

Chairman Hurley wrote to Chairman Alexander of the House Merchant Marine Committee that the legislation was necessary to prevent interference with the board's building program. Since the need for ships became acute many yards have been started by private interests seeking Government contracts and credit. The board desires to prevent speculation in shipbuilding and to stabilize the supply of labor and the market for materials. It also is desired to obtain greater control over the acceptance of contracts by domestic yards for foreign account.

Ship building facilities in the United States are being increased rapidly. Mr. Hurley today drew a distinction between possible ultimate capacity and expected output.

"I have not predicted the tonnage for 1919," he said, "for the simple reason that such predictions frequently give wrong impressions. Predictions depend on so many contingencies that they are frequently misleading. The point I have been making is that we have available or under construction 751 ways for cargo ships, and that if a speed of three ships a year can be obtained from each shipway, we will be able to turn out 13,518,000 tons in a single year after the peak of production is reached.

"I do not regard it as humanly possible to turn out any such tonnage in 1919. The facilities for such a tonnage are not yet available. When we were turning out tonnage at the rate of less than 1,000,000 tons a year the program we set for ourselves was 6,000,000. This year we hope to build at least 3,000,000 tons, which is more than three times the output of last year, but have set our program up to 13,518,000. When we plan so large a tonnage it means that we must immediately plan to enlarge our facilities, a task in which Director General Schwab is giving his personal attention at the present time."

COLUMBIA MAN HONORED.

Anton Stern, a retired manufacturer of 51 West Eighty-eighth Street, learned yesterday that his son, Arthur N. Stern, had received the French War Cross for courage and coolness under fire while rescuing wounded from the battlefield on April 24, 25, and 26.

The young man, who was a member of the class of 1913 at Columbia University, is with Columbia Ambulance Unit, Section 575. The entire unit was cited in the orders of the French Army Corps to which it was attached because of heroic conduct displayed during the battle of April 24, when it was surrounded by the Germans in No Man's Land and later saved by a French counterattack.

Stern's citation stated that he had rescued many wounded from the field during a very severe barrage fire and gas attack. A chum of his, George H. Schumann, of 28 West Eighty-eighth Street, also got the War Cross.

A letter which was received by Mr. Stern from his son describes the part the American Ambulance unit took in the battle. It read in part:

"We have been touring over shelled roads to and from a post in a village which was most of the time under barrage fire. To tell the truth, we were somewhat scared all the time, as we knew only luck would save us from catching a shell at any time. But we fooled Fritz and came out perfectly healthy, except for somewhat ruffled nerves and dry throats from running through gas. All these symptoms are now gone. The medal which I pulled is a cute little bronze affair, with a bright red and green ribbon with a bronze star."

In his letter George H. Schumann said that the ambulance unit had been serving for fifteen days at the hottest point of the line. His unit was with a French division, which suffered severe casualties. It was found that not all the wounded could be handled, and several ambulances were sent to reinforce the unit. As fast as these came up the Germans broke them up with shellfire, Schumann said. Out of thirty cars seventeen were lost. One member of the ambulance unit was killed and three wounded.

LEGATION CLERK HELD IN JEWEL PLOT

BROUGHT MYSTERIOUS BOX

Failed to Deliver It to State Department and It Is Seized—Stockholm Attache Involved.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—Investigation of the suspected plot to smuggle several hundred thousand dollars of so-called Russian crown jewels into this country has led to the detention in Dallas, Texas, of Silliman Evans, formerly a clerk of the American Legation at Copenhagen, pending an inquiry as to what disposition he made of a box bearing a legation seal which he brought back to this country a few weeks ago.

Evans returned from Copenhagen on a ship which is supposed to have carried a quantity of the jewels, some of which have been recovered in New York. He passed without examination a box which he said contained consular dispatches. Subsequently he failed to deliver this box to the State Department. No other charge has been placed against him.

Customs officers still are working on a number of ramifications of the suspected plot to smuggle mysterious jewelry into the United States, and inquiries may be directed to the State Department to ascertain the connections of an attaché of the American Legation at Stockholm. His wife in this country is said to have received jewels. At least two pearl necklaces supposed to have been started on their way to this country are missing.

At the State Department it was said that the first information the department had that Evans had severed his connection with the legation at Copenhagen was when he arrived in this country. He was appointed last December from Texas. It also was said that the department knew nothing of any connection of an attaché of the American Legation at Stockholm with a plot to smuggle jewels into the United States.

It is said that two men have been indicted in New York in connection with the case.

Box Found in Evans's Room.

DALLAS, Texas, June 12.—Silliman Evans, Texas newspaper man and former clerk in the American Legation at Copenhagen, was remanded to jail late today in default of $5,000 bail, after having been in custody of Federal officers since Tuesday morning on charges of smuggling. A small box bearing the Copenhagen Legation seal, for which Federal authorities had been searching in connection with the suspected smuggling of Russian Crown jewels into this country, was found today in Evans's room. The box, it is said, was found to contain several undelivered letters addressed to various Governmental departments at Washington. Evans's hearing was set for June 24.

Evans went to Copenhagen last December as clerk to the legation. Owing to ill-health he resigned, and only recently returned to Dallas. Judge Barry Miller, counsel for Evans, said today his client was desirous of returning to New York immediately to assist the Government in the smuggling case. To that end he urged that his client's hearing be advanced as much as possible.

According to Federal officials, Evans admits he met on the steamer coming to New York and became friendly with one of two men now under arrest in the East in connection with the smuggling case. He has no knowledge of that case, he says.

"The arrest of Mr. Evans in Dallas was caused by the filing of a warrant in New York City. When he left Copenhagen on return to the United States an attaché in the office asked him to bring a box to the United States, the box to be left in Washington. When Mr. Evans arrived in New York, in the rush of getting back to Texas the box was checked with his other baggage to Texas, and it was through carelessness that the box has not been sent on to Washington. Mr. Evans did not open the box—does not know now, and did not know when the box was handed to him, what it contained."

Evans Not Searched on Arrival.

Evans was the only passenger allowed to leave the steamer Hellig olav without being searched.

What was regarded as positive information that the jewels to be smuggled were on the liner was received by Government officials before the vessel arrived. Secret Service men searching for the jewels were on the ship. A reputed Russian Countess and an American man told the Secret Service men the jewels were on board. The Russian woman said she had seen them. But the most thorough search failed to reveal them.

An immediate search was started for Evans. When he left the ship he said he had to hurry to Washington on official business. His three valises, he explained, contained official documents. Inquiry in Washington failed to locate him and a country-wide search was ordered.

The alleged smuggling of Russian Crown jewels was disclosed on June 4 with the arraignment in Hoboken of Vladimir Jogelson and Montefiore G. Kahn on the charge of failing to declare the value of jewelry in their possession when they arrived here May 26 on a Scandinavian-American liner. It was said at the time that they had been accompanied by a man connected with an American embassy in Europe, who, in a United States Army uniform, had hurriedly left the ship on the plea that he was on an urgent mission to Washington.

The hiding place of at least $150,000 of the jewels is understood to have been discovered by the Federal authorities. The total value of the gems alleged to have been smuggled was reported to be $2,000,000. A woman is said to be involved in the plot as well as an American official in Russia.

Jogelson and Kahn were held in $10,000 bail each, which they subsequently furnished.

MICHIGAN DEMOCRATS NAME FORD FOR SENATE

LANSING, Mich., June 12.—Henry Ford, Detroit automobile manufacturer, who has been mentioned as the Republican candidate for United States Senator to succeed William Alden Smith, whose term expires next year, was indorsed by Michigan Democrats in conference here today and slated "to become our party candidate, although he is not within our fold." The indorsement of a Republican candidate by a Democratic conference is unparalleled in State political history.

The resolution said the action was taken "following the illustrious precedent of our Commander in Chief, Woodrow Wilson, in indorsing for re-election Senator Knute Nelson of Minnesota, because of his loyalty and support of the nation's war policy."

What effect the Democrats' action will have upon the Senatorship race was not apparent here tonight. Already ex-Governor Fred M. Warner and Charles E. S. Osborn have announced their candidacy for the Republican nomination, while Truman H. Newberry, who was a member of Roosevelt's Cabinet, has been persistently mentioned for the office.

The conference also indorsed John W. Bailey of Battle Creek as Democratic candidate for Governor. The primaries will be held in August.

TRAVIS REMINDS LEWIS OF LAW ABOUT VOTING

Controller Says He Does Not Intend to Violate It by Coercing His Employes.

State Controller Eugene M. Travis sent a reply yesterday to the two letters sent him by Attorney General Merton E. Lewis, who is a candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor, calling upon him to release employes in his department from any obligation they may feel to vote the "Whitman Office Holders' Entente" ticket, on which the Controller will be a candidate in the Republican primaries. Attorney General Lewis before writing Controller Travis took similar action with regard to the members of his own staff. Controller Travis wrote:

In your first letter you stated you felt it was due to you that Secretary of State Hugo and myself make public a statement similar to the one issued by you "releasing all subordinates in the present primary campaign from obligations to support Governor Whitman and leaving them free to vote as they preferred." I did not feel that a statement was necessary from me on this subject because any obligation on the part of a subordinate in my office to support a candidate for office at the ensuing primary is the personal act of such subordinate over which I have not, nor do I wish to have, control.

In your letter of June 7 you state: "Not hearing from you I take it that you do not intend to release your subordinates and, on the other hand, that you do intend to control their votes in the primary election by means of the power of discharge which you hold over many of such subordinates."

When you imputed this intention to me, I am sure you overlooked the provisions of Section 773 of the penal law applicable to primary elections, to which I respectfully call your attention. Subdivision 2 of this section provides, among other things, that any person who, being a public officer having any authority or influence affecting the promotion or removal of any public officer or employe, threatens to use such authority or influence, directly or indirectly, to affect the vote or political action of such public officer or employe, is punishable by imprisonment of not more than two years or by a fine of not more than $5,000, or both. I do not intend to violate the penal law.

Attorney General Lewis will be in the city today for conferences with Republican leaders.

49 Paris Hand Worked Dresses

The Custom-House Duty of Many, Alone, Running Into Thirty, Forty and Fifty Dollars

Will be

THIS is distinctly a treat for women who know and appreciate the subtle exquisiteness of Paris-made frocks. This group is conspicuous for the lavish hand embroideries—in wool or silk—which mark each dress.

Hand-drawn work is a feature. The dresses might be called hand-made, except that scrutinizing inspection reveals a seam or a joining sometimes machine-run.

All Paris Acclaims the Straight-line "Chemise" Fashion. These Are Approved Expressions of the Summer Mode

Cloud grey on Sevres blue
Maize outlined in black, worked on white
Burnt orange on bisque

Cerise on champagne
Navy blue on taupe

THE LIVES OF NATIONS HANG ON THAT CARD.

Precisely as if they were brand new, precisely as if nobody had ever thought of them or heard of them before, all the old trite arguments against intervention in Russia start up spasmodically the moment the idea begins to show unmistakable signs of gathering weight. Simultaneously there start into life a score of movements of sinister appearance, with Russian names back of them, deploring the idea of any effective kind of intervention, and pointing out the great need of sending only money and shoes into Russia—into the hands of Germany. We know enough of Germany's methods to be scant of courtesy with this latter phase; but the first, the uprearing of the old and obvious arguments against intervention as if they were new and weighty, is perfectly honest and deserves respectful treatment.

We are told, for instance, that we should offend the Bolsheviki if we sent an army into Russia; and we are further told that the Russian masses would misconstrue it and make common cause with the Bolsheviki. We are told—by The Evening Post—that we have no invitation from the Russian people, and that unless the will of Russia is with us we can accomplish nothing. We are told—The Brooklyn Eagle informs us—that the Cadet Party, which alone invites us, is not known to have any great strength or standing in Russia. We are told that Russia is "wholly mad"—it is The World that tells us this—and that it wants no "assistance from anybody "except the apostles of classism, "anarchy, confiscation, and repudia- "tion."

We will not say that these things are true, but we will say that the possibility of their being true was obvious to everybody before the subject of intervention was brought to the front. And we declare that, granting them to be true—which is a thing we do not grant—it is still the duty of the Allies to intervene and save Russia from herself. It is their duty to themselves, to the world, to civilization, to the future, even if we leave Russia out of all consideration as being as unworthy as The World thinks she is. We do not deny that the situation is full of complexities; but we do assert that there is one single, simple, utterly uncomplex fact in it. That is the fact that if we let Russia go the way she is headed, the world is doomed. On the salvation of Russia, whether she likes it or not, depends the salvation of all of us.

It may be that by intervening in Russia we should offend the sensitive nationalist feelings of the Internationalists, hurt the patriotism of the men without a country, graze the keen sense of honor of the Bolsheviki. It is better to do this than to erect the throne of Potsdam in Persia and Manchuria. It may be that the Russian masses would share the feelings of the sensitive Bolsheviki, would indeed support them as against us. We do not believe a word of it, but granted that it is true, we would run no more risk of having our army of intervention assailed than Germany runs. Germany is penetrating their country with open imperialist aims, and meets with no resistance worthy of the name. If we entered it with the banner of liberty, headed by a civil commission which made it possible to hold elections for a genuine Constituent Assembly in every province or town it entered—accompanied or headed by a Red Cross commission distributing the tangible proofs of our honesty and fair intentions—they might coalesce against us with a fiercer resistance than they have shown to the savage march of the Hoffmans and Eichhorns, but we doubt it. Granted, however, that this improbable thing is true, we could better afford to risk it than to sit by with folded hands, eternally doubting, doubting, doubting, while the German eagle builds his eyrie on the shores of the Sea of Japan.

It may be that the will of the Russian people has not expressed itself, but it is not true that we must wait for that will to express itself, unless by that is meant that we should commit ourselves to the idea of never doing anything. For there is no way in which the will of that people can possibly express itself. We are glad to see that The Evening Post, which advances this argument, is not quite easy about it, for it says:

> A call for intervention has come from sources far other than the "reactionary and privileged" classes of Russia. When "Babushka" BRESHKOVSKY, pioneer of Russian freedom, can call for intervention; when VLADIMIR BURTZEV finds himself driven by despair to regret the revolution; when the Social Revolutionists, organizers of revolution among the peasantry, call for intervention, it is plain that something more than imperialistic reaction is at work in Russia.

Clear, indeed; and yet our friend would wait, seemingly, until the significant call of these original revolutionists is stamped with an O. K. by some plebiscite or convention or direct primary. The thing is impossible. We must take the matter as we find it. As for The World's ascription of insanity to the whole Russian people, we cannot accept the possibility of such a thing even for argument's sake. No people ever went mad. When a nation has seemed to be mad it has been because its sheeplike majority was terrorized by its insane minority. If Russia were in this respect any different from France in 1794, for instance, then there would be indeed "something new under the sun"; something so new that we should have to reconstruct all we think we know about human nature. It is not true; but if it were, still the rock-hard fact would remain that the madness of one nation must not be humored to the extent of throwing away the lives of all the others. And we hold it self-evident that if Russia is absorbed into the German Empire, then the life of no other nation on earth will be worth a moment's purchase.

WILL THE GERMAN FLEET COME OUT?

As the Germans, with a touch of braggadocio, heralded their land offensive in the west, which began a little later than schedule time, on March 21, and as they scored unexpected gains in their earlier "drives," really making good their vaunting, the report now put out, apparently inspired, that they will soon seek a sea battle with the Anglo-American fleets cannot be dismissed with the skeptical comment that the German Navy learned its lesson at Jutland. It is true that nearly two years have elapsed since the High Seas Fleet, after sinking three British battle cruisers and three armored cruisers and losing, according to a German official statement, one battleship, a battle cruiser and four light cruisers, (the British insist the enemy losses were much greater,) sought safety at its base and has ever since remained there.

In wars of the past, combatant nations with the weaker navies have risked their fleets in battle sooner or later. Even Spain sent her cruiser squadron across the Atlantic in 1898 to try conclusions with the American Navy. Italy, with high hopes, suffered defeat in the Adriatic in her last war with Austria, which was not rated as a formidable sea power by the Italians. Germany claimed a victory in the battle of Jutland, and, although she has since acted on the principle that discretion is the better part of valor, she may still not fear her fate too much and put her faith in the High Seas Fleet to the touch again. The preface to the German Navy bill of 1900 contained this enunciation of policy:

> Even if the strongest naval power should succeed in meeting us with a fleet of superior strength, the defeat of a strong German fleet would so greatly weaken its own power that, notwithstanding its victory, its own position on the seas would be no longer secure.

It is conceivable that the German Government, elated with what it considered a military success in France, and planning to make it the basis for proposals of peace to that country, might send its fleet out to do battle in the North Sea, by no means confident that it could defeat the Anglo-American fleet, but expecting to sink so many of the enemy's ships that the sea power of Britain and the United States would be greatly weakened, and any plan of a long naval war on Germany would have to be abandoned. The situation would put her in a position to drive a hard bargain with the allies of France.

In order to obtain the best political results from a defeat that was not a disaster and might be claimed as a drawn battle, it would be characteristic of the Germans to give notice of their intention to seek a decision at sea. In the reports that the High Seas Fleet is going out there is the same boastfulness that marked the advertising of the offensive that was to end the war in the field. Thus the Kieler Zeitung interviews Admiral von TIRPITZ, asks him if the German Navy is strong enough to meet the allied fleet, and the father of submarine warfare responds in grandiose style that after the land forces have pushed the French and British armies to the other side of Paris "the Kaiser's boats will drive the English off the high seas."

The British Admiralty, unruffled by the German gasconade, but not despising the enemy, would welcome a trial of strength and gladly embrace the opportunity to destroy the High Seas Fleet and eliminate Germany as a sea power. With the formidable American dreadnoughts in the battleline, England, which has completed many more capital ships than she has lost during the war, might count with confidence upon a decisive victory. It is difficult to see how the allied fleet could be surprised, except possibly by Germany's use of new war material—for instance, gas shells or Zeppelins in large numbers carrying tons of high explosives. But two can play at the game of surprise, and England might have something "up her sleeve."

Before the war England was credited with thirty-six dreadnought battleships, Germany with twenty, and the United States with seventeen. At the outbreak of war England had a much longer list of dreadnoughts building and planned than Germany, and the United States had several leviathans on the ways, like the Pennsylvania and California. Germany has probably pushed new construction, but, opposed to Great Britain and the United States in a sea fight that was to be decisive, Germany would seem to be at a paralyzing disadvantage in first-line-of-battle ships. Could the allied fleet be caught napping? It is highly improbable. Its scouts are always out in great numbers on the North Sea. In a recent month even the big ships steamed 1,000,000 miles, and 6,000,000 miles were covered by the patrol.

A MAGYAR HUMORIST AND THE KINGS' UNION.

A great humorist is Baron BURIAN, Austro-Hungarian Minister of Foreign Affairs, TISZA's worthy pupil, whom CHARLES the Sudden, near the beginning of his reign, so suddenly dismissed to give the post to Count CZERNIN, whom he dismissed as suddenly and arbitrarily the other day. "The Dual Monarchy seeks no annexations," Baron BURIAN says. While Germany, whose serf Austria-Hungary is, has been conquering and annexing, in fact if not wholly in form, the fattest and richest parts of Russia, and is the absolute master of Rumania, Baron BURIAN's amiable Dual Monarchy has had no thought of conquest or annexation. To be sure, the Rumanian frontiers had to undergo "rectification" for Austria-Hungary's benefit, but, bless you, "the "annexation of this almost uninhab- "ited strip of wooded Carpathian "passes has nothing to do with the "subjugation of foreign peoples."

Of Austrian schemes in the Ukraine and Poland, of her part in enlarged Central Europe, not a word from the Baron. The innocent Austro-Hungarian lamb was threatened by the Rumanian wolf. "Our hitherto unprotected frontier" had to be guarded. So we grabbed those Carpathian passes. Really, it is not annexation to take an almost uninhabited strip of another country. One would think that the wood on those Carpathian passes had some magic virtue to screen robbery. The Rumanians are a subjected foreign people. They must be kept under the yoke. There must be no more talk of wresting the Rumanians of Transylvania from the mild sway of the Magyar grandees.

After Brest-Litovsk and the Rumanian peace, Baron BURIAN emits the old dulcet phrase of 1916, "peace by understanding." He professes still to believe in it. Well, if peace is far off, a thorough understanding of Austria-Hungary has at last penetrated the Entente Powers. They know Austria-Hungary. They are no longer duped by her pretended velleities for peace and dissonance with Germany. They know her as the chattel of Germany, the stool-pigeon of Wilhelmstrasse's peace confidence game. They know her as an absolute feudal State, held together by the Magyar and the German minority, the cruel oppressor of her subject peoples. Whenever Germany relapses again into her habit of trying to sow dissension among the Allies, she needs to use some more "honest broker" than Austria-Hungary.

The gem of Baron BURIAN's "patter" is this: "The Rumanians, I "dare say, are not under the impres- "sion that they have been treated "harshly." Why, this is excellent fooling. Doubtless, the oppressed nationalities of Austria-Hungary are likewise under the impression that they have not been treated harshly. That is why the larger towns, in particular those of the Slav provinces, have just been decorated with official placards warning the malcontents, the majority of the population, that the Government "will suppress by "force and without pity any attempts "at uprisings." Of course, it will if it can. The new united support by the Entente Powers of the national aspirations of the oppressed peoples cannot but sharpen their long purpose to be free. Perhaps the facetious Baron would be wiser to wait for a peace by understanding at home before he dangles that ancient and fishlike trap before the world again.

On the day we heard Baron BURIAN's jests we heard from his master, the complete letter writer. In late February he is said to have written King FERDINAND of Rumania, urging that members of the trade union of Kings must be true to union principles. "This is a time when Kings must stick together." Beware of Bolshevism. Look out that Rumania is not overrun by the Red Devils, and you and all other sceptre-bearing Kings swept from their thrones. No doubt it was an edifying discourse, worthy of the author of the Dear-Sixtine epistle. It is too much to believe, however, that King FERDINAND's conversion from the noble sentiments he expressed to an Associated Press reporter in the middle of the same February was due in any degree to the Imperial homily. If it was then "unthinkable for Rumania to accept peace without consent of her allies," none the less, irresistible force majeure was ordaining that separate peace. Lured to her overthrow by Russia, crushed by Germany, what other fate could be anticipated?

FERDINAND clings to his job. Germany had threatened to discipline and discharge him. In spite of his letter of thanks to the Germanophil Premier, MARGHILOMAN, for a sorrowful and ruinous peace, in spite of the so ably advertised "breach" between him and plucky Queen MARIE, it is possible to suspect that FERDINAND is a shrewd opportunist, accepting for the moment what ill-fortune sent him. On the distaff side, the Rumanian royal house is passionately Entente. On the sword side, it is formally and docilely German. Since the Allies were able to do nothing for him, why should he sacrifice himself to their cause?

He seems to be a canny sovereign. He finds it a good deal more prudent to bend before the storm than to imitate ALBERT of Belgium. In the Balkans anybody in the King business has to be wary. If the projected economic-military Central Europe becomes wholly a fact, Rumania must accept permanently the humble rôle allotted her. FERDINAND is no hero, but it is superfluous to judge him too sternly now that he is powerless. Those tubes of bacilli, containing glanders, dug up in the garden of the German Legation at Bucharest; those poisoned bonbons dropped from German airplanes for Rumanian children—even if one is a subject King, can he forget such German pleasantries?

Has FERDINAND changed his intimate opinion? The great Rumanian Germanophil leader, MARGHILOMAN, the present Prime Minister, said in the Fall of 1916: "From a partisan of "peace I have become a partisan of "war. My one desire now is final "victory." Events, the change of public sentiment, made him espouse nominally the anti-German side. In his thought did he qualify "victory" with "German"?

A HIGH NOTE.

The German press is given to indicating by headlines what the reader is to think of a news item, and "A High Note" is the title given by the Dresdner Anzeiger to an account, professing to come via Italy, of a speech delivered at the Metropolitan Opera House by "the in-Berlin-so-celebrated great tenorsinger CARUSO," who predicted the speedy victory of civilization and the downfall of German barbarism.

If this be a high note, it may be permissible to say that the note sounded by many German papers in their discussion of American affairs is somewhat low. Our troops are mentioned in the official communiqués only in connection with repulses, real or fictitious. A month or so ago the German papers were talking about the general distress among Americans at the proof of the complete worthlessness of their armies. "Captured American officers," says a dispatch sent from Berlin on May 3 by the Wolff Telegraph Bureau, "admit their own very slight "value in battle. An officer captured at Seicheprey said regarding "the German onslaughts, 'Who can "stand against your attack?' All "prisoners are agreed that the war "is absolutely unpopular, and that "the army, as well as those at home, "is longing for an early peace. With "the recognition of the superiority "of German leaders and German "troops there has vanished any con- "fidence in the success of their "arms."

The Münchner Zeitung finds proofs of the rapid exhaustion of FOCH's reserves in the appearance near Montdidier of Americans, "who are re- "garded by French and British as of "no military value." These troops, it appears, were flanked on both sides and supported in the rear by Senegalese in order to keep them from running away.

Nor are our misfortunes confined to the possession of an army that will not fight. German papers talk of our "wheat famine." General WOOD's relegation is explained by the Berliner Lokal-Anzeiger as due to the impossibility, now recognized by all, of carrying out his idea of an army of five millions of men, and all officials are represented as engaged in a competition of false statement in order to mislead the Germans, who are, however, too wise to be deceived.

All of which is a hopeful indication in these difficult times. We know what our army is doing, and the longer the Germans are kept in darkness the harder they will be hit when they come to realize it. And while German striking power seems unabated, it is a good sign that the authorities are afraid to tell their people the truth.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

This Test Applies to Us All.

It is not only for "labor," and not only with regard to strikes, that the American Federation, by its condemnation of action "which cannot be justified to the man risking his life in France," has supplied the ultimate test of loyalty, patriotism, and good citizenship. Everything that everybody does and is must stand that same test, at a time like this, and there are a thousand—yes, a million—activities and nonactivities, industries and idlenesses, in other days innocent or even commendable, that now are only less, and not much less, reprehensible than is the giving of aid and comfort to the enemy.

All, or at any rate most, of the often-proclaimed difficulty in distinguishing between the so-called essential and inessential businesses and trades disappears when the federation's truly inspired formulation of the truth is applied to them. It is not exactly what this or that man on the firing line in France thinks about them that decides. Those men, like the rest of us, are fallible mortals, and wisdom will not die with any one of them. It is rather what they and we feel when we and they think of what they are doing for the world rather than for us or for themselves—what they and we must realize as to the obligation resting on every man and woman and child to equalize, as far as may be, the exertions and the sacrifices on which the winning of the war depends.

So realizing, a common condemnation falls on all who are not doing what they can to hasten victory and on all who are doing what does not hasten it. Sins of omission are quite as grave as are sins of commission, and the striker who ignores his country's need is no whit worse than he or she who neglects a single opportunity for personal service, or who utilizes selfishly labor and skill that should be devoted to the one great cause. It is only because the men on the firing line have offered their all to that cause that they are better authorized than others to judge those who stay at home. But they, unfortunately, cannot enforce their judgment. We must do it for ourselves. When we do, we shall not talk any more about "business as usual," or heed pleas in behalf of the thousands whom suppression of the nonessential trades would throw out of employment.

Another Kind of "Atrocity."

According to The Toronto Mail and Empire, there is in the women's ward of the Kingston Penitentiary at this time a French-Canadian girl of 23 who is serving a sentence to two years of imprisonment because "in a log-driving bee in the Chaleur Bay region she donned man's attire." At some length and with some heat, The Mail and Empire editorially protests against the infliction of such a punishment—or of any—for such an offense. It is unable to see why facilitating the getting to mill of logs did not as adequately justify this brave and vigorous maid in wearing the only garb in which the work could be done as does the performance of any one of a score of tasks on farms and in munition factories.

The inability will be widely shared. All over Europe and throughout no small portion of this country women have put on more or less of the clothing hitherto monopolized by men, and while some have regretted the necessity for the change of apparel, the validity of the coercion has hitherto been universally recognized, and the followers of the new fashion have been admired and praised for showing sense as well as patriotism. Presumably, there is on the statute book, wherever this has been done, a ban on such abolitions of sex distinction, but it has been left for a Canadian Judge or Justice to be a follower, and enforcer of the law's letter slavish enough to penalize this act of high devotion.

So nearly incredible is it that in even a single court action at once so absurd and so outrageous could be taken that one is inclined to suspect, and half believe, that there was more to the log-driving case in the Chaleur Bay region than The Mail and Empire knew—that it therefore has not told the whole story. Rural justice is indeed queer, sometimes—almost as queer as urban justice sometimes is—but the possibilities of judicial pigheadedness are hardly great enough to include such obliviousness to the existence of new conditions as the imprisonment of this girl seems to indicate.

The Mail and Empire, it is surprising to notice, says that "there ought to be an immediate demand upon the Department of Justice for amelioration of the hard sentence." If it states the case correctly, that sentence needs more than amelioration. And so does the Judge who imposed it.

Still They Talk of Prager.

Germany is still filled with horror, it seems, at the lynching in an American town of one of her nationals—the man PRAGER—and through the Swiss Minister in Washington has insisted that our Government take measures to prevent the repetition of such a crime. So, at any rate, says a dispatch sent out by one of the German press bureaus, and it quotes a high official as hinting at terrible consequences to follow, unless we admit our responsibility and offer reparation.

The fact that the Swiss Minister denies the receipt from Germany of any request to take up this case on her behalf indicates that the high official knew that he was talking nonsense, and was talking it for effect at home, but it is an indication which cannot be trusted, as no Government is quite as indignant as is that of Germany at crimes committed by other people. Her own, of course, are different.

The lynching of PRAGER was a miserable and wicked piece of business. It differs, however, from thousands of like—and infinitely worse—outrages of which the Germans have been guilty in that nobody in the United States, except the criminals directly implicated, has defended or attempted to palliate its enormity. This difference is beyond German comprehension, so there is no use in discussing it further.

Washington Better in Summer.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Washington is most delightful and beautiful. Just at the right moment nature has encouraged the growth of everything green, and the great trees everywhere and the many patches of sweet green peas are refreshing to the eyes and the minds of tired war workers. It is amazing how these beautiful shade trees have grown up in a few years. I remember when the streets were hot and parched, with but little shade, and now everywhere in all directions there are cooling shadowy paths. So that really Washington promises to be a not uncomfortable Summer resort. The countryside abounds in fragrant honeysuckle and sweet smelling bushes. This is what tired man needs, and back to nature is more upbuilding and refreshing than any other tonic could be.

FOR GERMAN STUDY.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I assume that all loyal Americans are in sympathy with the motives which governed the Board of Education in the City of New York in its recent ruling regarding further instruction in German in the public schools of the city, but I question if the reasons given for its action are such as will commend it for adoption as a national policy. The intellectual task which the nation has set for the generation now in the public schools is to combat German ideas, a far more serious business than to boycott them. This controverting of Germany within the whole field of the political moralities is the task to which the President has summoned the nation at large, not simply for national defense, but also for aggressive aid in behalf of the oppressed nationalities.

But the first step in controverting Germany is to know Germany. It is a bad beginning to deprive the coming generation of the ready knowledge of the rudiments of the German language. The answer of Germany to this "attempt to shake the morale of the German people by causing them to realize that this great city was unwilling to endure longer their language, and that it desired to break off thus more completely the possibility of intimate relations with them through the medium of language" will be, if consistent with past methods, to redouble the study of English in the German schools. Germany has never yet made the mistake of committing its propaganda to even the least conspicuous of its subjects without furnishing adequate and timely equipment.

Allowing the proper reservation of diplomacy and of political ethics to the experts, elsewhere, in trade, in travel, in the common intercourse of men the world over, the impending combat is to be one in which any man may take his part according to his trained intelligence. Unintelligent patriotism can evidently have little part in this field of patriotic endeavor. I deprecate any superficiality, or narrowness, or timorousness, or weakness of any sort in preparing the generation now in the schools for the really militant service which awaits it in the cause of international as well as of national righteousness. We tried to ignore the challenge of German militarism. The result was, and is still, national unpreparedness. Have we any excuse for a like unpreparedness in meeting the challenge of German Kultur?

Against Any German Organization.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have been reading in the newspapers of a movement to organize American citizens of German birth or extraction for the purpose of demonstrating their loyalty to this nation. As one of the many failing under this class, I beg leave to register my protest. Far be it from me to in any way bring in question the good intention or the sincerity of the protagonists of this plan. To say nothing of the rich and promising opportunity that such a movement would afford the spy system and German propagandists in this country, I believe we should give no standing to hyphenism in this country under any condition whatsoever, however well meant at its inception.

I am an American citizen, (that is good enough for me,) as my honored father was before me, who in 1848 with true Carl Schurzian et al. motives quit the damnable country forever.

We American citizens of German extraction will do well if we extract our "extraction" from our thoughts as much as possible.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

May I voice my appreciation of J. C. Hemphill's letter in THE NEW YORK TIMES of recent date and thank him for describing so accurately conditions as they exist today?

I have just returned from a visit "Somewhere in the U. S.," convinced that our greatest enemies are not pro-Germans or pacifists, but these self-styled, loyal, 100 per cent. win-the-war Americans. They bemoan the inefficiency of Cabinet members, they thank God in public speeches for Lloyd George, they damn President Wilson with faint praise.

These patriotic Americans—Heaven save the mark—are preparing for the next election. Well, they say the Hun is preparing for the next war. Regardless of the critical situation of today, the political pot must be kept bubbling.

I cannot refrain from expressing to you felicitations for your delightful criticism on "The Ahkoond of Swat" in Sunday's TIMES. In the midst of a grilling war you are pounding and lashing the Hun, but mindful that a healthy brain must have some merriment, no matter what the tasks. Germany struck the downward path when Bismarck, and later the overrated aesthetic of Potsdam, taught them how not to laugh. The present-day Prussian would not smile if he saw Hindenburg sit on a tack.

"Tell me, does Liberty yet breathe?"

Is she become a dream, a name,
A myth, a long-extinguished flame?
A memory of something men once sought,
(But oh, so long ago!) for which they fought,
Poor fools, and gave all that they had to give,
And life itself, but would not yield them slaves?

Strange, strange obsession! Who with reason craves
A better fate than calm, untroubled hours,
And pleasant food, and sumptuous raiment, flowers
To crown life's mirthful feast, and gold—
Much gold!—by means of which to mold
Life to one's liking, and to buy release
From all that might disturb the body's peace!

So may they reason, empty-souled,
Who serve no other god than Gold!
So may they reason, dead of heart,
Who move among their kind, but still apart
So may they reason, whose perverted sight

False voices theirs, delirium-moved—
Emerging from the maze of poisoned thought!
Come where the worth of Liberty is proved,
Where human lives her loveliness have caught,
Defended to the last faint, blood-choked breath—

CREATES WESTERN RAILWAY REGIONS

RATE INCREASE AMENDED

WASHINGTON, June 12.—Director General of Railroads McAdoo today announced the extension of the Government's organization for the control of the railways by the creation of three new regions—the Northwestern, Central Western, and Southwestern. The new Directors are, respectively, R. H. Aishton, formerly Vice President of the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad; Hale Holden, President of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, and B. F. Bush of the Missouri Pacific. All have severed their private business connections.

Mr. McAdoo also appointed Oscar A. Price assistant to the Director General and M. Brice Claggett private secretary to the Director General. Mr. Price has been private secretary to the Director General and Mr. Claggett private secretary to the Secretary of the Treasury. John Kieley, who has been in the office of the Secretary of the Treasury since the administration of Mr. Cortelyou, will succeed Mr. Claggett.

In creating the additional regions Mr. McAdoo's object is to obtain the greatest efficiency of the lines involved. It is probable that he will soon establish a Pacific Coast region. The Directors of the various regions will endeavor to regulate transportation so that all the railroads may be employed most effectively as a unit.

Mr. Aishton, as Director of the Northwestern Region, will have offices in Chicago, and will have supervision of the following lines: Chicago & Northwestern; Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha, Chicago Great Western, Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, Great Northern, Minneapolis & St. Louis, Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie, Northern Pacific, Oregon-Washington, Southern Pacific lines, (north of Ashland, Ore.,) Spokane, Portland & Seattle, and Spokane International.

The Central Western Region, with offices in Chicago, will comprise the following lines: Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé, Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific, (except St. Louis to Kansas City, lines east of El Reno, lines El Reno to Memphis and branches, and south of Chickasha,) Chicago, Peoria & St. Louis, Chicago & Alton, Chicago & Eastern Illinois, Chicago, Terre Haute & Southeastern, Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, Colorado & Southern, Denver & Rio Grande, El Paso & Southwestern, Illinois Central, (north of Cairo and Paducah.) Los Angeles & Salt Lake, Northwestern Pacific, Oregon Short Line, Quincy, Omaha & Kansas City, Southern Pacific lines, (west of El Paso and Ogden, except north of Ashland, Ore.,) St. Joseph & Grand Island, Union Pacific, and Western Pacific.

The Southwestern Region, with offices at St. Louis, will comprise these lines: Fort Worth & Denver City, Fort Worth & Rio Grande, Gulf, Colorado & Santa Fé; Gulf Coast Lines, Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio; Houston & Texas Central, Houston, East & West Texas; International & Great Northern, Kansas City Southern, Louisiana & Arkansas, Louisiana Railway & Navigation, Louisiana Western, Midland Valley, Missouri Pacific System, Missouri, Kansas & Texas Lines; Morgan's Louisiana & Texas Railroad & Steamship, Rock Island Lines, (south of Chickasha, El Reno to Memphis, and branches, and St. Louis to Kansas City;) St. Louis-San Francisco, St. Louis Southwestern, San Antonio & Aransas Pass, Texas & Pacific, Texas & New Orleans, Wabash, (St. Louis to Kansas City and Omaha,) Wichita Falls & Northwestern, Texas Midland, and Wichita Valley.

Asks Extension of Time.

WASHINGTON, June 12, (Associated Press.)—Director General McAdoo today requested Congress to extend the time within which short-line railroads may be taken over by the Government to Jan. 1, 1919. The law now fixes the time as July 1 next. A resolution embodying the request was prepared by Senator Smith of South Carolina, Chairman of the Interstate Commerce Committee.

John Barton Payne, attorney for the Railroad Administration, who transmitted the request, said a rate of compensation for short-line roads would be agreed upon eventually, but, owing to many details to be worked out in connection with taking over of the roads, it could not be done within the time specified by the Railroad Control Act.

In response to a resolution, Director General McAdoo informed the Senate today that no agreements had been reached with any railroad taken over under the Federal Control act as to the rate of compensation the Government would pay. He said no carrier so far had refused to execute contracts. After the passage of the act, the Director General said, efforts were made to agree on a standardized compensation contract, but no conclusions had been reached.

In reply to a request for the names of carriers whose systems are now in possession of the United States, the Director General said that, since some roads might be relinquished before July 1, it would be impossible to prepare an accurate list before that time.

MODIFIES RATE INCREASE.

Will Be Added to Intrastate Tariffs as They Stand, McAdoo Orders.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—The rate increase order was amended today by Director General of Railroads McAdoo so that the 25 per cent. increase provided for will be added to intrastate rates as they now stand, and not after they have been increased to the level of prevailing interstate rates.

A determined fight to obtain such an amendment was made by members of State Railroad Commissions, who held that in many instances the original order issued by Mr. McAdoo jumped intrastate rates by as much as 300 per cent. This was found to be the case in a few instances.

This statement was made today by the Railroad Administration:

"The supplement eliminates from General Order No. 28 the provisions to the effect that State rates be canceled wherein they conflict with interstate rates, and provides instead that the increases on both class and commodity rates prescribed by the order as amended shall apply to both interstate and intrastate rates.

"Except that between points in the State of Oklahoma the class rates for both single and joint lines shall be as prescribed by the Interstate Commerce Commission in the last Shreveport decision, plus 25 per cent.

"The increased class rates are to be governed by the several classifications, both interstate and intrastate, including exceptions thereto and minimum weights that govern the existing rates.

"No change is made in the specific increases provided on commodities except that the increase of 15 cents per 100 pounds on cotton is to apply to any quantity instead of carloads, and the provisions on sugar in carloads have been amended to more clearly provide for maintenance of existing relationship.

"Intrastate rates and rates for transportation by water not now on file with the Interstate Commerce Commission are to be filed, but where now restricted to intrastate traffic the tariffs are to continue such restrictions.

"The minimum charge of $15 per car will apply only to line haul shipments and not to brick, cement, coal, coke, logs, ore, sand and gravel, and stone, (broken, crushed, or ground,) on which the existing rates as increased under Section 2 of the order shall apply.

"Section 20 is amended to provide specifically that the rates to be increased are those existing on May 25, 1918, including changes previously published but not then effective and not under suspension, except that the increases will apply to rates authorized or ordered by the Interstate Commerce Commission prior to May 25, 1918, and published between May 25, 1918, and June 15, and that where rates so authorized or ordered are not published before June 15 they may be increased as provided in the order by subsequent provision.

"Section 21 prescribes the proper legend to be used on the tariffs to provide interstate or intrastate application as authorized by the amended order."

A general order issued today by the Railroad Administration postpones until Aug. 1 regulations placing freight transportation charges on a cash basis. Transportation service rendered to the following is also excepted from the regulations: The various departments and bureaus of the United States Government; nations allied with the United States in war; various States of the United States; counties and municipalities of such States; District of Columbia and Alaska, and American Red Cross.

MRS. A. G. VANDERBILT WED TO R. T. BAKER

SENATOR PITTMAN BEST MAN

LENOX, Mass., June 12. Mrs. Margaret Emerson Vanderbilt of Racquette Lake, N. Y., whose husband, Alfred G. Vanderbilt, lost his life in the sinking of the Lusitania, and Raymond T. Baker of Washington, the Director of the United States Mint, were married this afternoon at 4:45 o'clock at Holmwood, the country home of the bride at Laurel Lake. The wedding was marked by simplicity.

Intermittent thunderstorms throughout the day caused a change in plans for the ceremony, which with warm, fair weather would have been held under a great elm in the lawn, but which led to rearrangements of the setting early in the day to an indoor wedding.

As soon as it was settled that the ceremony was to be in the cottage Mrs. Vanderbilt personally took charge of arranging the floral decorations, and quantities of pink and white peonies were used to arrange the setting for the ceremony before a fireplace in the reception room.

There was a bank of peony blooms on the mantel and filled in the fireplace, flanked on either side by tall palms. It was all very simple yet most effective. Other garden flowers arranged with wood ferns were used in the hall and other rooms.

The reception room looks out on Laurel Lake and the lawns which slope to its shore. It opens to a large Southern porch. This porch was enclosed and there the orchestra was stationed behind a screen of palms. There was music while the guests were arriving.

The Wedding Procession.

The wedding procession formed upstairs and entered the reception room, with Mrs. Vanderbilt walking with her father, Captain Isaac E. Emerson. Preceding them were Mrs. Vanderbilt's sons, Alfred G., who is 5, and George W., who is 4 years old, and Mrs. Reginald C. Vanderbilt, who was the bride's only attendant. Mr. Baker, with his best man, United States Senator Key Pittman of Nevada, met the party as they came before the floral setting.

Mrs. Vanderbilt wore a plan flesh-colored chiffon gown of soft clinging lines, which accentuated her slender figure. It was cut square in the bodice and showed to advantage a string of marvelous white pearls of graduated sizes. The gown was smartly trimmed with rare Venetian lace and was quite long, falling well toward the tops of her white satin slippers.

Mrs. Reginald C. Vanderbilt's youthful white chiffon afternoon frock with rather low bodice and flaring sleeves was very simple. She carried pink roses tied with wide white satin ribbon bows. Her hat was of georgette.

From its station on the inclosed porch a string orchestra played softly during the service, which was read by the Rev. Benson N. Wyman, pastor of the Lenox Congregational Church. The Rev. Mr. Wyman used a modified form of the Episcopal service, and Captain Emerson gave his daughter in marriage.

At the close of the service the Rev. Mr. Wyman shook hands with Mrs. Baker, and then with Mr. Baker, offering them congratulations. They turned and stood alone before the bank of peonies for a half hour receiving the good wishes and congratulations of their relatives and friends.

Mr. Baker's gift to his bride carried the note of patriotism, being Liberty bonds. President and Mrs. Wilson, who had been invited to be at the wedding, sent a set of books of the President's writings. Mrs. Baker received many beautiful gifts.

Honeymoon at Racquette Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. Baker went away from Holmwood very shortly after the ceremony in Mrs. Baker's limousine. They will go to Racquette Lake, where Mrs. Baker has a lodge, for the early part of their wedding journey. Later this month they will start for Denver and San Francisco, where Mr. Baker is to inspect the Government mints, combining a business trip with his wedding journey.

Mrs. Baker will continue her army cantonment and Red Cross work on her return. Mr. and Mrs. Baker will be at Holmwood until late in the season. He will make frequent trips to Washington, returning to Lenox for each week-end.

In October they will go to Washington, where Mr. Baker has taken a house.

Mrs. George Baker, mother of the bridegroom, and his sisters, Mrs. John Grissim and Mrs. Cleveland Baker of California, who had been guests at Holmwood, were present.

The official life in Washington was represented by Rear Admiral and Mrs. Cary T. Grayson, ex-Ambassador to Russia and Mrs. George T. Marye, United States Senator James D. Phelan, Secretary to the President and Mrs. Joseph P. Tumulty, and Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Titus.

Others present were Mrs. Isaac E. Emerson, Mrs. F. H. McAdoo, Mr. and Mrs. E. Vanderhorst Koch, and Henry V. Anderson of New York; Mrs. George Bend, Mr. and Mrs. Henry H. Pease, Mr. and Mrs. W. Roscoe Bonsal, Mrs. George E. Turnure, Mrs. John E. Alexandre, Miss Anna R. Alexandre, Mr. and Mrs. Frederic Schenck, Mr. and Mrs. Allen B. Fenno, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick S. Delafield and Miss Anita Delafield.

The marriage of Thomas Frederick Allen Bibby of Liverpool, England, and New York, and Miss Dorothy Ruth Gilroy, a daughter of the late Thomas F. Gilroy, who was Mayor of New York from 1893 to 1895, was celebrated at 12 o'clock yesterday at the Plaza. The wedding ceremony was solemnized by the Right Rev. Mgr. Henry A. Brann of St. Agnes's Church in the drawing room, which was gay with hydrangeas and roses.

Mr. Bibby had Lawrence Arnold as his best man and there were no ushers. A breakfast was served after the reception in the dining room of the suite at a horseshoe-shaped table decorated with delphineum, pink roses, and hydrangeas, and before Mgr. Brann were placed yellow orchids and white dahlias, the Papal colors.

Mr. Bibby, who has made his home at the Hotel Buckingham since living here, is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert K. Bibby of 7 Hyde Park, London, England. Mrs. Bibby is well known for her skill as a horsewoman and swimmer.

Eradley-Coffey.

The wedding of Miss May Coffey, daughter of John V. Coffey, and Thomas Collier Bradley took place at 10 o'clock yesterday in St. Malachy's Church, in West Forty-ninth Street, the Rev. P. A. O'Marra officiating.

The bride, who walked with her father, wore white satin gown with a court train and a veil of tulle, her only ornament being a pearl necklace, the gift of the bridegroom. Miss Katherine Bradley was the maid of honor and the bridesmaids were the Misses Ella Robinson and May Fullen.

Paul E. Southard acted as best man and Michael Bradley and Walter N. Keenan were the ushers.

Miss Johns Weds Forrest Andrews.

The marriage of Forrest Andrews, a lawyer of Knoxville, Tenn., and Miss Ella S. Johns, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William V. Johns of Bayside, L. I., was celebrated yesterday in All Saints Episcopal Church at Bayside.

Miss Marion Woolridge of Knoxville, a classmate of the bride at Smith College, where she was graduated last year, was maid of honor and Garnett Andrews was best man for his brother.

The bride since her graduation has been associated with the Red Cross Headquarters in New York. Her father is President of George Batter Company and was appointed last January by President Wilson as Chairman of the Division of Advertising of the Committee on Public Information.

Miss Lucy C. Neumer and the Rev. Charles H. Kues were married yesterday morning in the Huntington Chapel of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, by the Rev. James V. Chalmers. Arthur A. Neumer gave his sister in marriage. A breakfast for the bridal party followed at the Hotel Marseilles. The Rev. and Mrs. Kues are to reside in Port Jervis, N. Y., where he has been appointed rector of Grace Church.

Bridal Pair Leaves for Alaska.

Brown-Twombly.

Miss Bessie Fay Twombly, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Twombly of Jamaica, L. I., and Palmer Brown of this city, President of the Brown Textile Company, Ltd., were married yesterday in Christ Church, Brooklyn, Canon William S. Chase officiating. Judge E. Earle Brown of Rhode Island was best man for his brother.

Miss Ellen Bourquardez Engaged.

Alfred Bourquardez of 611 Cathedral Parkway announces the engagement of his daughter, Miss Ellen Bourquardez, to Lieutenant John Honan Keating of the Medical Reserve Corps. Lieutenant Keating is the son of William H. Keating of this city, and is at present house physician at St. Luke's Hospital. He is a graduate of Fordham University and the College of Physicians and Surgeons.

A Dinner for Calder Bridal Party.

United States Senator and Mrs. William M. Calder will give a dinner at the Montauk Club, Brooklyn, tomorrow evening for the bridal party of their daughter, Miss Elsie Calder, who is to wed Lieutenant Robert Corwin Lee on Saturday evening in the Twelfth Street Reformed Church, Brooklyn.

Mrs. Norwalk Seeks a Separation.

Albert B. Norwalk of 740 Riverside Drive was sued yesterday for a separation by Mrs. Mabel L. Norwalk on the ground of cruelty. Mrs. Norwalk asks liberal alimony on the ground that her husband has an income of $6,000 a year and recently sold a half interest in a patent valve for $25,000. They were married in 1909 and have a daughter, Marjorie, 8 years old.

RUSH OF APPLICANTS TO BE WAR NURSES

ONE MAN VOLUNTEERS

Brooklyn Officials, In Doubt, Ask Washington Whether He May Be Accepted.

Several hundred women applied yesterday at Red Cross booths and the Red Cross headquarters in this city and in Brooklyn for blanks on which to make applications for enlistment to serve as nurses in the army and navy, or to enroll for training which will enable them later to join the nursing corps.

More than 25,000 nurses are wanted by the army and navy between now and the first of the year, and approximately one trained nurse in three must volunteer, if the estimated needs of the war hospital service are to be met. Nurses are being enrolled in every State, but so far no figures have been compiled to show the success achieved by the campaign so far. In New York City a total of 123 nurses have already been accepted into the hospital service since the drive began. These are trained nurses, prepared to go to the front at once. The number does not indicate the rate at which the campaign is progressing, because many trained nurses who have made applications to serve the country in army and navy hospitals will be accepted later.

One of the forty-nine nurses who volunteered in Brooklyn yesterday was a man, who had been graduated by a recognized training school. The officials here were in doubt whether a man could be accepted as a Red Cross nurse, and referred the matter to Washington.

The Central Committee for the Enrollment of Nurses announced yesterday that the speakers at the mass meeting at Carnegie Hall on Friday night would be Dr. George E. Vincent, President of the Rockefeller Foundation; Lieut. Col. Winford Smith, who will represent Surgeon General Gorgas; Miss Jane A. Delano, Director of the Department of Nursing of the American Red Cross, and Miss Annie W. Goodrich, Dean of the Army School of Nursing. William C. Breed, Chairman of the Red Cross Second War Fund Committee, will preside. Fifty-six nurses in Red Cross costumes will act as ushers, and 150 nurses will be seated on the platform.

A Red Cross ambulance carried speakers yesterday to every Red Cross booth in the city, where nurses were urged to serve and young women were urged to enroll in the Army Nursing School. More than 200 nurses will be outfitted by the Red Cross for overs-as service at St. Andrew's Hotel, Seventy-second Street and Broadway, at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

WANT NAMES OF OFFICERS.

Auxiliary of the 306th Infantry Desires to Complete Organization.

The Auxiliary of the 306th Infantry, recently organized to care for the personal welfare of the regiment now in France and to keep in touch with their mothers, wives, and sisters, is anxious to obtain the names of the relatives of the commissioned officers of the regiment.

The auxiliary has been unable to get the complete roster, and requests that all women related to the commissioned officers of the 306th Infantry send their names and addresses to the Secretary of the auxiliary, Mrs. Rochester B. Jones, 112 East Seventeenth Street, so that they can assist in carrying on the work of the organization.

Lieut. Caffy Graduates and Weds.

Miss Catherine Frances Howell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willis Kirkpatrick Howell of Morristown, N. J., and Lieutenant Eugene Mead Caffy were married yesterday in the chapel at West Point by the Chaplain, the Rev. Percy Silver. Lieutenant Caffy was graduated yesterday, also his best man, Lieutenant William Gordon.

Miss Ruth Brewster was maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were the Misses Mary F. Ruffum, Ruth and Hattie Howell, Anna Kuell, and Marcia Mitchell. Little Miss Betty McAllister was the flower girl.

Miss Helen Elisabeth Maier, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Maier, and L. William Hill of Chicago were married last evening at the Methodist Church in Ridgewood, N. J., by the Rev. Dr. Frederick Wright. Mrs. Jay Westcott of Chicago was matron of honor, and the Misses Evelyn Grieve and Allene Madden were the bridesmaids. Stuart Plattenburg acted as best man, and Jay Westcott, Harry Taylor, Ernest Cubberly, and J. W. Gessford were the ushers. The couple will spend the Summer at the South Shore Country Club of Chicago.

Lieut. Azoy Marries Miss Groves.

A military wedding was held yesterday afternoon in the Munn Avenue Presbyterian Church, East Orange, N. J., when Miss Margaret Field Groves, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Charles Austin Groves of New York, recently of East Orange, was married to Lieutenant A. C. M. Azoy, Jr., U. S. A., of East Orange, a great-great-grandson of George Clinton, the first Governor of New York.

Mrs. MacAdam Gets a Divorce.

A decree of divorce in favor of Mrs. Mary MacAdam, a niece of Charles J. Doherty, the Canadian Minister of Justice, was signed yesterday in Brooklyn by Supreme Court Justice Scudder. Testimony upon a marriage ceremony in California after John Moore MacAdam, a steel construction engineer, had obtained a divorce in courts there from his wife and after Mrs. Adele Hill Rupprecht had obtained a divorce from F. K. Ruppprecht was given before Justice Scudder. The marriage of MacAdam and Mrs. Ruppprecht was not recognized, and Mrs. MacAdam named Mrs. Ruppprecht as co-respondent. Mrs. MacAdam has the custody of two children.

T. P. Shonts Resting Comfortably.

At Post-Graduate Hospital, where Theodore P. Shonts, President of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, was operated upon on Tuesday for an internal trouble, it was said last night that Mr. Shonts was resting comfortably. Following the operations he spent a very comfortable night, and yesterday got considerable sleep. It was expected last night that an improvement in his condition would be noted today.

MRS. F. J. SHEPARD IS OPERATED UPON

Mrs. Finley J. Shepard, who has been suffering from appendicitis for about two weeks, was operated on yesterday afternoon, and was said last night by her secretary to be resting comfortably. Mrs. Shepard's illness was not regarded as serious, and up to Tuesday it was thought that an operation would be unnecessary. Complications appearing then, however, made it appear that plans would have to be changed.

Consequently, Mrs. Shepard was removed early yesterday afternoon from her home at 570 Fifth Avenue, to a hospital the identity of which was not disclosed. Here an operation was performed by Dr. Robert Coleman Kemp of 103 East Fifty-seventh Street, and it was said late last night that this had been entirely successful, and that Mrs. Shepard was now resting easily in a condition which was not regarded as serious. Dr. Kemp refused to discuss the case.

This is Mrs. Shepard's first serious illness in many years. Born Helen Gould, she had acquired great fame for philanthropy from the time of the Spanish-American war, when she took charge of relief and sanitation work at the army camp on Montauk Point, to which the fevered and wounded soldiers were returned from Cuba. She was married in 1912 to Finley J. Shepard, who was the executive manager of the Gould system of railroads, the majority of stock in which was inherited by her. The pair had no children of their own, but they adopted a boy to whom was given the name of Finley J. Shepard, Jr., in 1915, and last Fall adopted two girls.

SILAS B. BROWNELL DEAD.

Silas B. Brownell of the law firm of Brownell & Patterson, 71 Wall Street, died yesterday at his home, 322 West Fifty-sixth Street. He had been a practicing attorney in New York City for sixty-five years.

Mr. Brownell was born on Oct. 11, 1830, in Knox, N. Y., the son of Dr. Moses Brownell and Mary Brown Brownell. He was graduated from Union College in 1852, and after practicing law in Troy, N. Y., a few months came to New York City. In 1861 he was in Washington with the 7th Regiment. He was a trustee of Princeton Theological Seminary, President of the Board of Trustees of Union College, Chairman of the Board of Trustees of Barnard College, having been a trustee since the founding of the college; a trustee of the American Bible Society, Recording Secretary of the New York Bar Association, and an elder of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church.

He received the degree of L. L. D. from Columbia University and Hobart College. He was also a member of the Kappa Alpha Fraternity and held the unique record of having attended fifty annual dinners of the organization in New York. He was a member of the University and Downtown Clubs and of the Lafayette Post, G. A. R. He is survived by his wife and four daughters.

Lieut. Hegarty Buried with Honors.

The funeral of Lieutenant John Laurence Hegarty, who was killed in an airplane at Lake Charles, La., last week, was held in the Sacred Heart Church, Mount Vernon, and the services were attended by many brother officers of the dead aviator. Thousands of persons stood bareheaded as the funeral procession passed through Mount Vernon. The funeral mass was sung by the Rev. David J. Leahy, assisted by the Rev. Edward J. Flynn and the Rev. Father Shea. The funeral escort consisted of a provisional company of the local National Guard organization. Six Lieutenants of the air service acted as pall bearers and seven others served as a guard of honor. At the cemetery the military custom was followed.

PRESIDENT'S LETTER DEFEATS BORAH PLAN

WILSON EXPLAINS MEANING

"Not That There Should Be No Private Discussion of Delicate Matters," He Writes.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—The Senate today rejected the policy of "open diplomacy" by defeating the Borah amendment for public consideration of treaties, the vote being 50 to 23.

Opponents of public discussion of international covenants clinched the victory which it was apparent yesterday that they had won, through a letter written by President Wilson to Secretary Lansing on March 12, just after the original Borah resolution was introduced. In this letter the President expressed his opposition to Senator Borah's plan, and explained what his language meant when, on Jan. 8, in outlining peace terms before Congress, he said that "open covenants of peace, openly arrived at, are requisite to a lasting peace, and that from now on the processes of diplomacy must be always in the open."

Senator Hitchcock, Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, read the letter today in support of his interpretation of the President's language, which yesterday formed the theme of warm debate.

The text of the President's letter follows:

My Dear Mr. Secretary: I wish you would be kind enough to formulate a careful and conclusive memorandum for the use of the committee of the Senate with regard to the inclosed resolution. I take it for granted that you feel as I do that this is no time to act as the resolution prescribes, and certainly when I pronounced for open diplomacy I meant, not that there should be no private discussion of delicate matters, but that no secret agreements of any sort should be entered into, and that all international relations when fixed should be open, aboveboard, and explicit. Cordially and sincerely yours,

WOODROW WILSON.

This authoritative explanation of the President's view was accepted by the Senate at its face value, and much surprise was expressed that so many Senators supported the Borah plan. On the final vote nineteen Republicans and four Democrats supported the open discussion. They were:

Democrats—Ashurst, Bankhead, Beckham, Culberson, Fletcher, Hitchcock, Kendrick, King, Kirby, Lewis, McKellar, Martin, Myers, Overman, Owen, Phelan, Pomerene, Ransdell, Reed, Robinson, Saulsbury, Shafroth, Sheppard, Shields, Simmons, Smith, (Ariz.,) Smith, (Md.,) Smith, (S. C.,) Swanson, Thomas, Thompson, Tillman, Trammell, Underwood, Willey—36.

Republicans—Brandegee, Dillingham, Hale, Harding, Knox, Lodge, McCumber, McLean, Nelson, Page, Poindexter, Smoot, Sutherland, Warren—14.

Senators Curtis, La Follette, Wadsworth, and Watson, Republicans, all of whom were paired or absent, were said to favor the resolution.

By agreement late today the Senate decided to vote no later than 4 o'clock Thursday on the Underwood resolution limiting debate, to which Senator Borah's proposal to open discussion of treaties was an amendment.

The discussion of the Borah amendment today continued to centre about President Wilson's meaning as well as about the debate in the British House of Commons on ratification of treaties by that body in future.

Senator Hitchcock held that the question in England did not involve public consideration. Senator Borah contended that nowhere in the debate was there a suggestion that the doors of the House of Commons be closed during discussion of treaties.

In replying to Senator Hitchcock and to the President's letter, Senator Borah said:

"Mr. President, the Senator referred to my misconstruction of the President's language, and he intimates that I have put the President in a false position. Of course I did not intend to do so; I do not understand that I have done so. I do not think his language is subject to misconstruction or misunderstanding at all. I doubt very much if my understanding in regard to it is any different from that of the President, and I read it here in order that it may go into the Record this morning in connection with the letter which the Senator has read.

"The President is not inapt at all in the use of language, and he is evidently very careful in executing any possibility of arriving at secret agreements and making the agreements known after the people have been bound. He covers that subject perfectly and completely by the clause, 'open covenants openly arrived at.'"

TAX EXEMPTION PLEAS NETTLE CONGRESSMEN

Ways and Means Committee Finds Most Witnesses Anxious to Avoid War Burden.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—Members of the House Ways and Means Committee expressed impatience today over the fact that most of the witnesses appearing to discuss the new revenue legislation came with pleas for exemption from war taxation.

Albert H. Reeves, representing the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, suggested that new taxes be placed upon the automobile owner instead of the manufacturer, whereupon Mr. Kitchin said 3 per cent. tax on automobile sales was already passed to the consumer with an added increase. Representative Moore of Pennsylvania and other members remarked that the committee was seeking increased revenues, not decreases and exemptions.

Representative Longworth of Ohio declared he was getting impatient with witnesses who talked about tax increases being a burden, when it is the invariable rule of the interests they represent to pass the tax along to the consumer.

Job E. Hedges of New York City and Frederick G. Dunham, formerly State Insurance Commissioner of New York, speaking for the Association of Life Insurance Presidents, urged the committee not to apply the excess profits tax to life insurance companies, which already pay an income tax and a tax of 80 cents per $1,000 on new business. They contended that incomes on investments which earned 4½ to 5 per cent., to which the life insurance companies are restricted, should not be subjected to the excess profits tax, which is aimed at war business.

Thomas W. Blackburn of Omaha also declared the new business tax on insurance was very heavy, and explained that companies he represented, instead of passing the tax on, paid it themselves on the theory it was temporary.

COMMERCIAL PAPER.

Yesterday....6 per cent. for the best names
Tuesday.....6 per cent.
The quotations are for six months' paper.

Fall Undergarments Well Sold.

There has been considerable business placed for women's fancy undergarments for next Fall, according to reports from the trade in this city. In several cases, merchants are reported to have sold requirements up into the beginning of 1919. The present situation is said to have had a great deal to do with this. "It is a practical certainty," said one large manufacturer yesterday, "that prices will not be lower during the rest of the season, while in all probability they will be considerably higher later on. Merchants are coming to realize this and are buying for as far ahead as they consistently can."

Trade in Fancy Glassware.

In some quarters it is said that fancy colored glassware has been well bought this Spring. Others report that business in these lines has not been particularly active. It seems, however, that there has been a fairly good trade in the large commercial and social centres of the country. Sets for special purposes such as iced tea sets, iced coffee sets, and grape juice sets, comprising a jug and six or more tumblers, seem to be quite popular. They are usually made up in colored glass. Two-tone effects are said to be in favor and are also taken in small trays for nuts or for bon bons.

Hobble Skirt Coming Back?

With skirts growing tighter and tighter each season as a result of the efforts of designers to use as little material as possible, authorities in the local women's apparel trade are wondering whether the hobble skirt is not coming back into vogue again. Already skirts are so narrow that the fashionably dressed woman can execute a high step only with great difficulty. And Fall skirts are in many instances even smaller than those now being worn. The latest importations from Paris also show this tendency toward the very narrow skirt.

Predicts Big Exports in Future.

"We have thought," said a local authority on foreign trade yesterday, "that our exports since 1914 have been so tremendous that such records can never be duplicated in the future when the world is at peace. In this I think we are wrong. When the war is ended the world will need our peace products no less than it now requires our war products. We will have the merchant marine, now building, in which to carry our goods to the four corners of the world, and if we do not use it to the limit of its capacity it will be because we have neglected the golden opportunity of the present to prepare for after-the-war business."

Drugs Are in Demand.

There is a good local inquiry for drugs and chemicals, but trading is hampered by scant supplies. On the other hand, Drug and Chemical Markets will say today, increased receipts of some crude materials augmented production of a number of finished products, which caused downward tendency in prices. Crude drug prices, however, are tending upward. Medicinal gums are active, and several notable price gains were established this week. Sharp advances were also established for cocaine hydrochloride, strychnin crystals, and other drugs. Antipyrin was lowered 42 a pound.

Felt Sport Hats Coming In.

Sport models of felt in pearl gray, white, or pink are beginning to appear in local millinery circles, especially in the higher-priced goods. Some show the edges bound with satin or grosgrain ribbon, either in the same color or a contrasting shade. The shapes include large mushrooms, sailors, and large effects with drooping brims and telescope or dented crowns. Trade authorities think that these hats will find favor, as they can be worn with sweaters of the sport variety.

Made-Up Veils Going Well.

Judging from reports heard in the local market, made-up veils are having everything their own way this season. Many draped veils of this type show wide borders of chiffon, often in shades contrasting with the color in the body of the veil. Other borders make use of picot edges. Novel border effects are general, and in more than one case are the distinguishing point of the veil. A considerable use of chenille dots is seen in the trimmings used, they being embroidered in many out-of-the-ordinary patterns. However, the more formal scroll and floral patterns are not missing, many of these being hand run in the higher-priced goods. The popularity in meshes is divided between the hexagon and the square, or filet type. As in several other lines, navy seems to be the most desired color, with the darker hues of brown, taupe, black, and white also much in vogue.

Co-operation Might Help.

There appears to be little doubt that co-operation of various kinds would help save sales and money for the stores and trouble for some of the retailers' employes and the wholesalers. For instance, a case was cited yesterday in which a shopper was told by a clerk that a certain kind of merchandise was not carried, when it was in plain sight right across the aisle. When taken to task about it by the aisle manager, who overheard the clerk's assertion, the latter replied that she was not at fault, as the goods were not on the counter behind which she was serving. In another instance a wholesale concern is advertising a well-known garment for men at prices to consumers at 10 cents less than it can be had in any of the big retail stores. A number of "kicks" have resulted already from this discrepancy, the idea in the mind of the consumer being that the stores are going in for profiteering.

Big Trimmings Season Ahead.

Despite the war and the consequent need of economy, wholesale buyers recently returned from abroad predict that the best Fall trimmings season in years is at hand. A wide variety of this merchandise is being offered to buyers. Girdles, tassels and other forms of jet trimmings are well thought of by wholesalers, and spangles are expected to be better than ever in a wide range of colors. Black spangles in particular are said to be slated for a big season. Excellent business in silk and bead fringes is also reported, in various shades, and in widths ranging up to twelve inches. In these goods taupe, navy, black and other dark shades are prominent. Various colors and shapes of wooden beads are included in the new season's offerings, and it is said that they will be widely used. Novel effects making use of silk and wool embroideries are expected to duplicate their Spring successes.

Gray Goods Sales Still Lag.

If there was any improvement in the local gray goods market yesterday in the amount of business done, as compared with previous days of this week, it was not vis

JOINS BROKERAGE FIRM.

Alfred J. Johnson, the City Chamberlain, announced yesterday that he had entered the firm of Anderson, Bruns & Co., stock brokers, with offices at 60 Wall Street, as a special partner. Mr. Johnson said he had no intention of resigning as City Chamberlain, but on the contrary had entered the firm so that he would have more time to devote to city affairs, as the firm would now look after his personal business affairs. He said that he became a special partner by investing $100,000 in the firm, the members of which, he said, were old friends of his. At his office in the Municipal Building the Chamberlain made this statement:

"My association with Anderson, Bruns & Co., is merely the result of a formal readjustment of my business affairs, made necessary by the fact that I no longer have time for anything but official business, local relief work, &c."

Diamond Dealers Sentenced.

Federal Judge A. N. Hand yesterday sentenced Paul and Joseph Goldmuntz of the firm of Goldmuntz Brothers, diamond dealers, to terms of eighteen months and a year and a day, respectively, in the Atlanta Penitentiary for receiving and concealing assets of a bankrupt merchant. Both of the defendants were released on bail pending an appeal.

DISCUSS MISSIONS IN WAR.

International Union Opens Its Sessions at New Rochelle.

The thirty-fifth annual meeting of the International Missionary Union opened last night in the First Presbyterian Church in New Rochelle, and will continue for four days. The meeting will plan to put missions on a war basis.

About 100 missionaries from many parts of the world are present. The meetings formerly were held at Clifton Springs, but the exigencies of war compelled the organization to come to New Rochelle this year. The Rev. J. Sumner Stone of New Rocheele is the presiding officer.

Must Stay In Matteawan.

The petition of James McPartland to be released from Matteawan on the ground that he is now sane was dismissed yesterday by Supreme Court Justice Hotchkiss and McPartland was remanded to the institution to which he was committed in 1906. Justice Hotchkiss said that the defendant's testimony impressed him favorably, but in view of the statement of experts that McPartland is mental defective and might suffer a relapse under the strain of normal life the court decided that he had failed to show by a preponderance of evidence that he was now sane.

You Are Not Justified

No manufacturer in the present emergency is justified in becoming pessimistic over the future—his own or the nation's. The country today is richer than it ever was. Your opportunities are bigger than ever they were. My money is at your disposal on eminently reasonable terms—so cheer up!

My optimism is infectious. Come in and get some of it. No obligation and strictest confidence.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

There was a further recovery in the volume of dealings on the Stock Exchange yesterday, with a more consistent improvement in prices than had been made in the two preceding sessions. The list has taken its tone very largely from the war news, and the character of the reports yesterday was of a nature to strengthen the belief that the German campaign is being slowed down. Weather conditions in most sections of the country continue favorable to the growing crops, which are daily looking better.

Steel barely missed par on an advancing movement yesterday, but closed a point under its best price with a reduced net gain. The tobacco issues were in demand, Tobacco Products advancing 2½ on heavy dealings and United Cigar Stores moving up 1¾ in response to an unusual demand. Among the rails the outstanding feature was the strength in Reading, that issue advancing 2¼ points.

Yesterday's meeting of the members of the War Finance Corporation board with leading New York bankers was chiefly productive of a better understanding on the part of the visitors of the grounds upon which bankers are disposed to ask for an amendment to the law which will free them from the necessity of guaranteeing promissory notes. The corporation has a long docket of applications awaiting its consideration, and was approached yesterday by representatives of several companies desirous of getting Government assistance, but according to the Chairman it has not yet decided on the fundamental tests which will be applied to cases submitted to it. The Brooklyn Rapid Transit's maturities of nearly $58,000,000 have not yet been provided for, but the action of the stock yesterday indicated greater confidence in the ability of the management to obtain funds through the War Finance Corporation.

Call loans continue to command 6 per cent., which is not an exorbitant rate in view of the preparations being made for heavy tax payments due this week. There were very small offerings of time money. On the Cotton Exchange the market weakened on the favorable weather conditions and the spreading fear that the War Industries Board will fix prices for cotton cloths and yarns. Bonds were quiet, with the Marine 6s crossing par again.

GOOD TONE IN LONDON.

LONDON, June 12.—Money was in fair demand on the market today. Discounts were quiet. Of the £92,000,000 Treasury notes bought last week, £78,000,000 have been repaid.

On the Stock Exchange sentiment was helped by the French success on the battlefront yesterday, but the situation still prevented expansion outside of ordinary investment operations which maintained Entente Allies' bonds and gilt edged securities. Grand Trunk and oil shares were firm. Speculative issues were dull.

Trading Quiet on Paris Bourse.

PARIS, June 12.—Trading was quiet on the Bourse today. Three per cent. rentes 60 francs for cash. Exchange on London, 27 francs 16 centimes. Five per cent. loan, 88 francs 5 centimes.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Call Loan Rates Range from 4½ to 6 Per Cent., Closing at 5½ Per Cent.

The range of call money rates yesterday was from 4½ to 6 per cent. and the final quotation was 5½ per cent. The market for time money was rather quiet, owing to a scarcity of available supplies. The rate for 90-day loans was quoted at 5¾ per cent., with 5½ per cent. for 60 days and 6 per cent. for all other maturities.

U. E.

"Unlimited Endorsement"

The American's New Unlimited Co-Insurance Policy—known as the "U. E." Policy—stipulates that immediate payments be made of covered past due or insolvent accounts beyond the normal, that are filed with the company and not collected in sixty days. The policy literally advances money on past due accounts.

Manufacturers and jobbers, there is a form of policy suited to the particular needs of your individual business. Full particulars upon request.

BIG BANKERS OPPOSE WAR FINANCE PLANS

MEET FEDERAL BOARD HERE

Suggest That Utility Companies Seek Permission to Increase Rates to Improve Credit.

Twelve of the leading New York bankers conferred yesterday at the Sub-Treasury with the Directors of the War Finance Corporation, to whom they stated plainly that they were not inclined to guarantee the obligations of concerns which sought to obtain financial assistance from the Finance Corporation through the medium of banks and trust companies. The bankers pointed out that the provision of the act calling for virtual bank indorsements of loans made to business concerns whose operations are "necessary or contributory to the prosecution of the war" was objectionable, on the ground that it was unsound banking, for it called on the banks to assume contingent liabilities which it was not proper for them to assume.

In brief, the bankers expressed the view that unless and until the act was amended the usefulness of the War Finance Corporation would probably be limited to the making of direct advances to corporations as provided for in Section 9, which authorizes such direct loans "in exceptional cases."

The attention of the Directors of the Finance Corporation was invited to the cases of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, whose $57,735,000 of notes mature July 1, and to the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, which is seeking a loan of $37,700,000, and it was asserted that no bank or trust company would be willing to guarantee or indorse the obligations of these companies as called for under Section 7 of the act, should the corporation adhere to its previously stated policy of not making direct advances in such cases. In this connection, it was pointed out that other public utility concerns found themselves in the position where they required assistance and could not obtain it from the War Finance Corporation.

Little Hope of Amendment Now.

Among the suggestions advanced by bankers was that the act creating the War Finance Corporation be amended, but this proposal was met with the statement that Congress was so busily engaged with other legislation that prompt action on amendments would probably not be obtained. Another suggestion was that the public utility companies take steps to obtain permission to increase their rates so that their revenue might be increased and their credit standing bettered to the point where banks and bankers would be more likely to undertake to finance them.

The conference was attended by Directors W. P. G. Harding, Eugene Meyer, Jr., Clifford M. Leonard, and Angus W. McLean of the War Finance Corporation, Secretary McAdoo, the Chairman, being the only absent member of the board.

The twelve New York bankers who attended the meeting were J. P. Morgan and Thomas W. Lamont of J. P. Morgan & Co.; Jerome J. Hanauer of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., Charles E. Mitchell of the National City Company, Frederick Strauss of J. & W. Seligman & Co., James S. Alexander of the National Bank of Commerce, Walter E. Frew of the Corn Exchange Bank, Francis L. Hine of the First National Bank, Gates W. McGarrah of the Mechanics and Metals National Bank, Seward Prosser of the Bankers Trust Company, Charles H. Sabin of the Guaranty Trust Company, and Albert H. Wiggin of the Chase National Bank.

Governor Harding's Statement.

Mr. Harding, who is Governor of the Federal Reserve Board and Managing Director of the War Finance Corporation, issued the following statement after the meeting:

"A meeting of the Board of Directors of the War Finance Corporation was held at the Sub-Treasury this morning. A number of prominent bankers were present for the purpose of discussing the operations of the corporation in connection with the financial institutions of the country. The discussion of any specific cases was merely incidental to the discussion of the general principles involved. No definite conclusions were reached, and the Board of Directors of the corporation has no announcement to make at this time."

After luncheon, Mr. Harding met several other bankers who had called at the Sub-Treasury under the erroneous impression that there was to be a public session devoted to a discussion of the problems of the public utility concerns. They were mostly representatives of houses which specialize in financing public utilities. Mr. Harding conversed with them, but did not enter into any long discussion.

Mr. Harding, in reply to queries by reporters regarding the policies of the War Finance Corporation, asserted that the Board of Directors had just about organized and was proceeding cautiously with its business. He declined to enter into a discussion regarding pending applications for loans.

Calls Case Exceptional One.

Mr. Harding quoted the act in respect to the making of direct advances to business concerns, and in answer to questions said that the United Railways Company of St. Louis, which obtained a loan of $3,235,000 for six months at 7 per cent., was an "exceptional case," as defined by the act. Mr. Harding admitted that the St. Louis concern could have obtained the funds it required from the regular banking channels, and was therefore not forced by circumstances to apply for assistance to the War Finance Corporation. Asked why the board had considered the St. Louis concern an "exceptional case," Mr. Harding replied that the collateral it had put up for the loan was excellent, and that the board thought the loan a desirable one. He referred to the fact that part of the collateral consisted of $800,000 of 3½ per cent. Liberty Loan bonds.

Asked whether the board had made the advance because private bankers had asked the traction company a high rate of interest, Mr. Harding declared that he did not know whether the rate was too high, but thought that if the company received a six months' advance from the War Finance Corporation it could before the termination of that period arrange for another loan with the banks. Mr. Harding indicated that the advance made to the St. Louis concern was in the nature of a test case.

Bankers who attended yesterday's conference were asked last night whether they knew more about the operations of the War Finance Corporation as a result of their interview. One of them said: "I do not feel that we learned much, but I am sure that the Directors learned a great deal in regard to the attitude of the bankers."

EXTRA DIVIDENDS DECLARED

The Mahoning Coal Railroad Company declared yesterday a special dividend of $15 a share on the common stock, in addition to the regular semi-annual disbursement of $5 a share and of 2½ per cent. on the preferred. The common stock dividend will be paid Aug. 1 and the preferred on July 1.

The United Shoe Machinery Corporation declared an extra dividend of $1 per share on the common stock, in addition to the usual quarterly payment of 50 cents a share. The usual preferred stock disbursement of 37½ cents per share was voted, all being payable July 5 to stockowners of record June 18.

AMERICANS TO OPEN NEW BANK IN CHINA

Corporation Organized Here with Capital of $2,000,000 and Surplus of $500,000.

The Guaranty Trust Company of New York announced yesterday that arrangements had been made for the establishment of an American bank in China. A corporation, to be known as the Asia Banking Corporation, has been organized under the laws of New York, with a capital of $2,000,000 and a surplus of $500,000, all of which has been subscribed. Among the stockholders in the new company, besides the Guaranty Trust are the Mercantile Bank of the Americas, the Anglo, London, and Paris National Bank of San Francisco, the First National Bank of Portland, Ore., and the National Bank of Commerce of Seattle, Wash. A few other institutions interested in foreign trade will be added to the list of stockholders.

The corporation proposes to engage in international and foreign banking in China, in the dependencies and insular possessions of the United States, and ultimately in Siberia. Its principal business will be carried on in the Far East. The head office will be in New York. An agency will most probably be established in San Francisco, and a central branch in Shanghai, where it is proposed to locate the general manager of the Far Eastern business. Present plans contemplate the future establishment of other branches in Hankow, Peking, Tien-tsin, Harbin, and Vladivostok. As soon as the Russian situation clears the corporation will be ready to establish itself itself in Russia and Siberia, or to affiliate itself with old or new Russian banks.

Transactions between this country and the Far East are at present being financed largely through agencies of foreign institutions and by the International Banking Corporation, which is affiliated with the National City Bank. Those responsible for the organization of the new company declare that the increase in trade between the United States and the Far East makes greater banking facilities necessary and justifies the establishment of American banks and investment companies for this purpose.

The Capital Issues Committee of the War Finance Corporation has approved the issue of the capital stock of the Asia Banking Corporation, the position being taken that the investment of capital in this enterprise does not mean a diversion of capital for new purposes, since a large amount of the business proposed to be transacted is now being conducted by American banks with their own reserves through their correspondent banks. There will be no public offerings of the stock.

FURTHER INSTRUCTIONS ON FOREIGN EXCHANGE

Federal Reserve Bank Sends Out Rules Affecting 12,000 Dealers in the United States.

The Federal Reserve Bank of New York sent out yesterday a notice of additional instructions regarding foreign exchange transactions that have been prepared by the Division of Foreign Exchange of the Reserve Board, acting under President Wilson's executive order of last January. More than 12,000 dealers in foreign exchange in the United States are registered, and all of them have been obliged to send forms for declaration of nonenemy interest to all of their foreign correspondents.

"'Dealers,' as defined under the executive order, are prohibited without the approval of the Division of Foreign Exchange of the Federal Reserve Board from acting upon confirmations of cablegrams which may be received by them, wherein the original cablegram in part or in whole has never been delivered to them. All confirmations of cables sent by 'dealers' to correspondents or others outside of the United States, covering a transfer of funds or other financial operation, must be written upon separate sheets of paper, which must not carry any other correspondence, and must be delivered unsealed, but stamped ready for mailing, to the Division of Foreign Exchange, 14 Wall Street, New York, when the confirmations are to go from the Eastern seaboard, or cover cablegrams leaving this country by the Eastern seaboard—to the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco when confirmations are of cablegrams leaving this country via the Western seaboard—to the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas when the confirmations are of cablegrams leaving this country via Galveston, and to the New Orleans branch of the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta when the confirmations are of cablegrams leaving this country via New Orleans. Any confirmations which may be discovered by the postal censorship in the body of other letters, or that have been otherwise mailed than as above, will be forwarded to the Division of Foreign Exchange of the Federal Reserve Board for such action as may seem advisable.

"'Dealers' having the accounts of foreign correspondents on their books are prohibited from accepting credits to such accounts which are not accompanied by the name of the party making the original request that the deposit be made, and by the name of the party to whom the foreign institution receiving the credit is to pay the funds, and for whose account such payment is made, and the purpose of the deposit must also be stated. It is important that this order be noted by all bankers, institutions, individuals or others in the United States, without regard to whether they are 'dealers' or not. This information will be required in addition to the regular 'customers' statement.'

The new regulations state that all declarations of foreign correspondents should be filed with the Division of Foreign Exchange immediately on receipt. "Dealers" are also requested to advise the division by letter of all foreign correspondents to whom they have sent declarations, which have not been returned, or where cable advice that they were being sent has not been received by the close of business June 20.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

Gold coin to the amount of $44,000 has been withdrawn from the Sub-Treasury for shipment to South America.

Ames, Emerich & Co. have taken $300,000 City of Milwaukee 5 per cent. bonds at public sale.

H. W. Dubiske & Co. have opened offices in the Singer Building, with Edwin Hawley Spence as manager.

R. W. Pressprich & Co. have received an award of $400,000 City of Yonkers six months notes, due Dec. 11.

John L. Merrill has been elected President of the Mexican Telegraph Company and the Central and South American Telegraph Company. W. Emlen Roosevelt was elected Chairman of the board of the former and Edmund L. Baylies of the latter company.

Alfred J. Johnson, City Chamberlain, has been made a special partner of Anderson, Bruns & Co. as part of a readjustment of his private business affairs to permit him to give more time to his official duties.

The Board of Trustees of the New York Savings Bank declared yesterday a dividend for the six months ending July 1, 1918, at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum.

U. S. STEEL WAR TAX OF $233,465,000 PAID

Greatest Impost in History Turned Over to the Treasury in Second Week in April.

$1,172,325 DISCOUNT SAVED

Federal Reserve Banks Called Into Service to Handle Subsidiary Payments.

The United States Steel Corporation's Federal income and excess profits tax bill of approximately $233,465,000, the largest ever paid by an American corporation, and probably the greatest in history, has been settled in full. Payment was made, in fact, in the second week of April, when Treasury certificates of indebtedness for an estimated total of $230,000,000 were turned in to the various collectors of Internal Revenue, and the balance was paid in cash. By anticipating the due date two months and taking advantage of the discount at the rate of 3 per cent. per year from the day of payment to June 15, which was allowed by the Treasury Department, the corporation saved $1,172,325.

The way in which the management handled the great transaction brought into operation new facilities afforded by the Federal Reserve Banks. The corporation bought at various times last year Treasury certificates for the purpose of using them in the tax payment. Part of these were accumulated by the various subsidiary concerns, located in nearly all the Federal Reserve districts, but the great bulk were held by the parent corporation in New York. When it was decided to deposit them, the Steel Corporation's executives hesitated at mailing millions of dollars worth of Government paper to the thirty-odd subsidiaries which had taxes to meet, because of the risk of loss in transit. It was finally decided to seek authority for a single operation, grouping the transactions together.

Richard Trimble, Treasurer of the corporation, wrote to the Treasury Department asking if it were possible for the certificates at New York to be deposited with the local Federal Reserve Bank, which could allocate the payments due the Internal Revenue Districts, where the subsidiaries were located, acting through the other Reserve Banks. Permission was received and the certificates were delivered to the Reserve Bank in this city. The next step was a notification from the Reserve Bank here to the other banks that the payments in behalf of the subsidiaries had been made. The Revenue Collectors in the Reserve districts were informed of the transaction, and bookkeeping entries rounded out the record of the liquidation of the tax bill.

The final date for filing income tax returns was April 1, but the Steel Corporation, because of new tax rulings which developed near the close of the month, received an extension of two weeks to complete the statement. In seeking the most economical method of meeting the Government's requirements, the management had the choice of securing the 3 per cent. discount by immediate payment or of holding the Treasury certificates until the last moment for the sake of the 4 per cent. interest which the certificates bore. The original interpretation of the law by the Bureau of Internal Revenue provided that the saving to a taxpayer through the discount privilege should be considered as income and taxed accordingly. Before the corporation arranged to meet the payment, however, this ruling was reversed and the proceeds of the discount was made tax free. The interest on the certificates was taxable and would have been put in the highest graduated class of earnings under the tax law, subject to a 60 per cent. impost, in the cases of a number of the subsidiary companies at least.

Figuring the amount of certificates held by the corporation at $230,000,000, the 3 per cent. discount on them was equal to about $1,150,000. The interest on the certificates for two months at 4 per cent. would have been approximately $1,533,000, but of this 60 per cent., or $919,800, would have been taken by the Government as an additional tax, leaving a net return of $613,200. These totals show clearly enough why it was to the corporation's financial advantage to anticipate the tax date.

RUSH TO PAY TAXES.

The Internal Revenue Bureau in the Custom House yesterday concluded the examination of a large number of men who presented themselves to undergo the test for appointment as inspectors. It was said that fifty inspectors would be named from the successful candidates, and that these would be apportioned between the offices of Collectors Edwards and Eisner in Manhattan. It will be the duty of these inspectors to run down evaders of the income and excess profits taxes.

Crowds of taxpayers were again in evidence at the four revenue offices in New York yesterday, and at the end of the day income and excess profits tax payments had run up to several millions of dollars. The Second, or Wall Street District, was thought to have gathered in close to $10,000,000, while Chief Deputy Prendergast of the Third, or Upper Manhattan District, said the collections for the day reached $5,000,000.

EXPORTERS EARN $3,188,727

Net Income of Gaston, Williams & Wigmore Equals $10.63 a Share.

The annual report of Gaston, Williams & Wigmore, Inc., issued yesterday, covers operations up to April 30, 1918, the date on which this corporation ends its fiscal year. The report shows a net income of $3,188,727, equal to $10.63 a share on the company's 300,000 shares of stock, which, although having no par value, are carried on the company's books at $40 a share. However, during the year the corporation wrote off $1,751,309 of Russian business, reckoning the accounts as uncollectible in view of the present conditions in Russia. This would bring the net income down to $1,437,318, or $4.79 a share.

During the year dividends of $1,275,000, or $4.25 a share, were paid on the company's stock, and $22,487 added to the surplus account, giving a total surplus on April 30, 1918, of $1,432,418. During the year, President Gaston reports, the gross business done by the export and import branch of the business was $57,587,991, and the corporation on April 30 had $16,727,942 of unfilled orders on its books. The Gaston, Williams & Wigmore Steamship Corporation during the year paid in full and retired its issue of $2,500,000 of bonds outstanding, and $1,000,000 of the outstanding notes of the parent corporation were paid at maturity, April 15, 1918, leaving $3,000,000 of the original $5,000,000 issue outstanding.

"During a large portion of the last fiscal year," says President Gaston in the report, "the operations of the company have been restricted by its careful and willing compliance with those governmental regulations which the participation of our country in the war has made necessary. It is to be anticipated that there conditions will continue with increasing severity until peace is declared, and it will therefore be our aim to carefully conserve the resources of the company in the most liquid condition possible."

PUGET SOUND TRACTION, LIGHT & POWER COMPANY

7 Per Cent. Three-Year Sinking Fund Mortgage Gold Notes

Dated June 1, 1918 — Due June 1, 1921

Callable at 102 during 1918, at 101 during 1919 and at 100 during 1920. The Company agrees to pay interest without deduction for any Normal Federal Income Tax up to 2 per cent.

For further particulars regarding these notes, we refer to a letter of Stone & Webster, Managers of the Company, copies of which will be sent upon request, and from which we summarize:

The Company, through ownership or control, does substantially all the electric street and interurban railway business and the greater part of the commercial electric lighting and power business in the Puget Sound district, including the cities of Seattle, Tacoma, Bellingham and Everett, Washington, serving an estimated population of more than 500,000.

These $12,250,000 notes are issued to provide for the retirement, by call at par, on August 1, 1918, of the entire issue ($10,057,000) of the Company's 6% Mortgage Bonds maturing February 1, 1919, and to reimburse the Company's treasury, in part, for additions recently made to the property.

EARNINGS AND EXPENSES

Gross earnings	$10,172,652
Operating expenses and taxes	6,306,622
Net earnings	$3,866,030
Balance	$1,673,080

Net earnings over 1¾ times annual interest charges on entire funded debt

Current gross and net earnings are the largest in the Company's history and are steadily increasing.

These notes are secured, in the opinion of counsel, by a first mortgage on hydro-electric plants of 26,500 H. P. and on about 245 miles of transmission lines therefrom to Seattle, Tacoma and Everett. They are also secured by a direct mortgage upon the greater part of the system (including 116,400 H. P. additional, of which 82,000 H. P. is hydro-electric), subject to the various underlying closed mortgage bonds.

WE RECOMMEND THESE NOTES FOR INVESTMENT

WAR TRADE RULES AROUSE EXPORTERS

Shippers Say New Regulation Forces Them to Lie or Quit Business.

MUST SIGN STATEMENTS

Concerns exporting merchandise, especially shippers of oil, are very much concerned regarding a recent regulation of the Bureau of Exports of the War Trade Board. The shippers concur in the assertion that the new regulation either forces them to lie in order to obtain an export license or to give up doing an export business. In applying for export licenses shippers are asked to sign a statement and agreement furnished by the War Trade Board. They are required to sign either form X-11-A or X-12. The first form states that the applicant declares that none of the articles specified in the application has been purchased or acquired for export and that the applicant has not taken any steps in the process of producing or fitting the articles for export.

Form X-12 states that the applicant acquired for export the articles named prior to May 15, 1918. In this case no provision is made for purchase of merchandise after May 15. Oil shippers are unable to first make application for export licenses before committing themselves to take certain quantities of oil. The shippers are obliged to purchase certain quantities of oil when the opportunity offers to do so. In this commodity most offers are made subject to acceptance within four to seven days. This means that when the offers are placed before the principals and accepted by them the shippers are obliged, in order to obtain the oil, to definitely pledge themselves to its purchase. But the difficulty in the way is that time does not permit of first asking for export license before placing orders.

"This clause is simply ridiculous," said one shipper yesterday. "It ties our hands as effectively as if we were stopped from doing business. What can we do if we have to sign such an agreement? We have oil that we purchased after May 15. This agreement applies only to the oil purchased prior to that time. On the other hand, form X-11-A is equally as bad for it puts us in another quandary. Under the agreement in this form we have to give our word that none of the articles have been purchased for export. That, of course, we are unable to do, and so we are unable to obtain the export license. Of course we can easily resort to a subterfuge to obtain the license, but as we do not wish to do that we have only one other choice, and that is to refrain from doing an export business.

"Applicants for licenses to export any article to an allied country must obtain the approval of the mission in the United States of the country to which the exportation is to be made. This recommendation calls for the number of the import license issued by the country of destination. In the case of Great Britain the import license is issued by the Import Restriction Committee or the Board of Trade in London. But such a license will not be issued unless an actual sale has been made and a specific transaction consummated for a certain quantity of merchandise. Failing to get a license means that we are unable to make a quotation, and thus unable to do business."

Shippers in New York have been referred by the local office of the War Trade Board to Washington for relief. Up to yesterday, however, none of them, as far as could be learned, had received from Washington any assurances that there had been any modification of the new agreements.

THE COTTON MARKET

Unexpected Amount of Speculative Holdings in Near Position Disclosed.

Disappointment in both the weather map and the price-fixing news by recent speculative buyers of July yesterday more than offset the firmness of spot markets on the local cotton market. The weekly weather report was considerably more favorable than had been expected. Liverpool showed the effect of recent drastic restrictions upon English consumption, and the price-fixing conferences among cotton manufacturers appeared to be generally disregarded as unlikely to have any effect upon raw cotton. The course of the market revealed an unexpected amount of speculative holdings in the near position, while the relative steadiness of the active new crop deliveries was attributed to their better technical position. July lost 32 net points on the session, while October declined only 13, and the entire range was from 7 to 45 points off, with the close steady.

The opening was off from 19 to 28 points on the favorable weather map and selling orders from Liverpool. There was enough covering by still apprehensive shorts to cause a brief rally, but thereafter the market declined on a succession of bearish crop and weather reports, the Weather Bureau report being especially disappointing to bulls, while a private crop estimate put the condition at 85.5, an improvement of 3.4 per cent. in two weeks.

There was a fair amount of trade buying, especially in October, on the decline, however, while the usual aggressive short selling was absent, and as soon as the long liquidation was over, the market became quiet and firm, with rallies in the new crop months which brought them back close to Tuesday's final prices. Exports yesterday totaled 2,606 bales. Southern spot markets ranged from 12 points higher to 25 points lower with small volume of business.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

Net gains from a fraction to 2 points were registered at the close of a fairly active market yesterday on the Consolidated Stock Exchange. Final prices were below the day's high levels, due to realizing sales in the afternoon session, but the closing tone was strong, and fractional improvements were noted in an upturn in the last half hour of business. Trading interest was chiefly centred in the industrials, but Reading more than shared this interest in the afternoon session, being especially active and strong.

SUBWAY STRIKERS GOING TO SHIPYARDS

Several score of subway employes who are on strike while the Public Service Commission, the Board of Estimate, and the contractors remain at odds regarding the mode of relieving the situation got tired of waiting and got other jobs, it was said yesterday by officials of Steam Engineering Union. Most of the men have found work for the Government in shipyards, and have reported to officials of the union that jobs can be obtained in twenty-four hours for all the men, numbering between 5,000 and 6,000, who are on strike.

"We are trying to keep our men together until Friday, when the Board of Estimate meets," said a union official yesterday, "and we will have most of them with us at that time. We are anxious to keep the organization intact, and so we hope that a settlement will be arrived at speedily. If the matter has not been taken care of by Friday the men will melt away in all directions, and when the work on the subway is resumed it will be with green hands.

"All sides agree that the men should have an increase in wages, and the dispute seems to be strictly a technical one regarding the manner in which the money is to be provided. There seems to be no common-sense reason why the wage demand cannot be granted by agreement of both sides, leaving the controversy as to the legal points in abeyance. We hope that the long series of blunders in building the subways does not have such a blunder added to it as that of letting an organization of experienced men be dissolved because of a wrangle which a couple of business men could adjust in five minutes."

It was stated by officials of the union that they were greatly concerned for the union, because it would be seriously damaged as an organization if the men on strike scattered in all directions for jobs which were awaiting them. It was pointed out that the strike was unique in all parties concerned were practically in agreement that the demands of the workers should be fairly met and that the majority of the men on strike were refraining from taking other jobs as a special favor to their employers. The differences between the Public Service Commission, the Board of Estimate and the contractors yesterday were no nearer settlement than they had been on the preceding day.

Matthew A. McConville, Chairman of the committee for the striking subway laborers, promptly placed a body of the strikers at the disposal of the Public Service Commission yesterday, when Chairman Straus explained that a critical condition existed in the tunnelling at Sixtieth Street under the East River. It was stated some danger existed of a cave-in which would be followed by flooding the subway, causing a loss of several million dollars, and possibly endangering life. Mr. McConville said:

"We appreciate the danger and great loss the city would suffer, and we have no desire to involve the city in any unnecessary loss. We will see to it that the men on this particular work continue on the job and that any work of a similar dangerous nature is attended to."

Two hundred and fifty men are engaged in work on a duct carrying power from the Interborough's Fifty-ninth Street plant to power stations which will supply the new Lexington Avenue and Seventh Avenue subway quit work yesterday in sympathy with the subway strikers. The work on which this men are engaged is as important as any part of the finishing of the subways, since the new lines cannot be operated until the power supply lines have been completed.

MARSHAL SEIZES BOOKS AT ROBINS SHIP PLANT

United States Marshal James M. Power, accompanied by agents from the Department of Justice and the Naval Intelligence Bureau, yesterday visited the office of the Robins Dry Dock and Repair Company at the foot of Beard Street, Erie Basin, Brooklyn, and seized about one hundred books and other documents bearing upon Government contracts under way there.

Three large automobiles were used to carry the seized articles to the office of Assistant United States District Attorney Henry Ward Beer, in the Federal Building. It is understood that some of the documents will be used by him in the Grand Jury investigation which he is conducting as to the manner in which Government contracts were being carried out in a number of shipbuilding and repair plants in Brooklyn. A similar raid was made last Friday at the plant of the Tebo Yacht Basin Company at the foot of Twenty-third Street.

ASK WOMEN TO JOIN POLICE.

A call has been issued by Captain Charles H. McKinney for a meeting at the Shubert Theatre, 225 West Forty-fourth Street, at 10 o'clock this afternoon, at which the organization of the Women's Police Reserve will be completed.

"It is earnestly requested," Captain McKinney said in the call for the meeting, "that all women of ability and character desiring to render helpful and patriotic service to the Government and community attend this important meeting."

The women will be organized in semi-military form. There will be a theatrical unit and a unit for working in homes.

WAR ON TICKET BROKERS.

Ziegfeld Will Try to Keep "Follies" Seats from Speculators.

For the first time in many years an effort will be made this season to sell all of the tickets for "The Ziegfeld Follies" at the box office, instead of dealing through the ticket brokers. It has been the annual custom in the case of the "Follies," as with other musical big shows, for the brokers and hotel agencies to unite for the purchase of a certain number of seats nightly for a period of four to eight weeks, and these seats have then been resold at various premiums.

A disagreement last week between Florenz Ziegfeld, Jr., and the brokers regarding the price of tickets is said to have led to the present "war," and it is now announced by the show's management that every effort will be made to keep seats out of the hands of the speculators.

20 OUNCES OF BEEF NEW WEEKLY RATION

MAY USE PORK INSTEAD

Restaurants to Serve Boiled Beef Twice, Beefsteak and Roast Beef Once Weekly.

The Federal Food Board made public yesterday the new meat regulations formulated by United States Food Administrator Hoover for a larger conservation of beef and beef products. Under these regulations hotels and restaurants are forbidden for an indefinite period to serve boiled beef at more than two meals each week, to serve beefsteak at more than one meal each week, and to serve roast beef at more than one meal each week. Householders are requested not to purchase more than one and one-quarter pounds of clear beef weekly, or one and one-half pounds, including the bone, per person in the household.

Food Administrator Hoover's message is as follows:

"The demands for beef for our army and allied armies, and their civil population for this Summer are beyond our present surplus. On the other hand we have enough increased supply of pork this Summer to permit economical expansion in its use. It will therefore be a direct service to our armies and the allies if our people would in some degree substitute fresh pork, bacon, hams, and sausage for beef products. We request all hotels and restaurants not to place on their menus or serve boiled beef more than two meals weekly, beefsteak more than one meal weekly, and roast beef more than one meal weekly. We ask householders not under any circumstances to buy more than one and one-quarter pounds of clear beef weekly, or one and one-half pounds, including the bone, per person in the household.

"The public will realize that the changing conditions of production from season to season, the changing situation in shipping and, therefore, of the markets available to the Allies, and the increasing demands for our growing army with the fluctuating supply of local beef in France, all make it impossible to determine policies for long periods in advance. We have recently asked for economy in all meat consumption, we wish now to emphasize further reduction of beef by the substitution of pork. It is anticipated that this will hold good until Sept. 15, and the co-operation of the public is most earnestly requested."

The Federal Food Board, in conformity with a message from United States Food Administrator Hoover, adopted the following rule for New York State and city yesterday:

"Beginning Monday, June 17th, all proprietors of restaurants and hotels shall not place on their menus or serve boiled beef more than two meals weekly, beefsteak more than one meal weekly, and roast beef more than one meal weekly. Fresh pork, bacon, hams, and sausage should be served as substitutes. As conservation of beef and beef products is again required of us in a larger scale and for an indefinite period, proprietors of restaurants and hotels are advised that any violation of this rule on and after June 17 will be judged cause for the summoning of the violators before this board. We ask all householders, clubs, and others to join with the public purveyors of meats in making this new call for conservation as effective as the necessity requires. We ask householders not to buy more than one and one-quarter pounds of clear beef weekly, or one and one-half pounds, including the bone, per person in the household."

Arthur Williams, Federal Food Administrator for New York, left yesterday for Atlantic City to attend the annual convention of the National Electric Light Association. He will be the principal speaker at the dinner at the Hotel Traymore this evening, his topic being "Food Problems."

WASHINGTON, June 12.—The announcement that the Michigan Democrats had decided to offer Henry Ford the nomination for Senator brought only a quizzical smile to the lips of Mr. Ford when he was told about it tonight. Mr. Ford smiled again when asked if he had come to Washington to have a conference with Senator William Alden Smith, the Republican incumbent, in regard to the withdrawal of the latter from the Senatorial race.

Mr. Ford finally remarked that he seldom talked much, and that the subjects brought to his attention seemed to be ones which he did not care to discuss. He added, however, that he had come to Washington to see Secretary Daniels, and did not expect to see Senator Smith.

MAY ENFORCE MEAT ORDER.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—The United States Food Administration today asked the American people to adopt a new beef ration during the Summer months so that large quantities may be shipped overseas for the American Army and the armies and civilian populations of the allied nations.

Hotels and restaurants are directed not to serve boiled beef at more than two meals each week, and beefsteak is to appear on the menus at only one meal weekly. Householders are asked to cut down beef consumption to one and one-quarter pounds of clear beef per person per week, or one and one-half pounds including bone.

The supply of pork on hand, it was announced, is sufficiently large to permit its use without severe restrictions, and it is expected that pork products will be substituted.

The Food Administration believes that eating places will conform with the requests without making it necessary to use compulsory measures. If the results are not obtained, however, steps will be taken to enforce the order.

Geneva Authorities Turn Over Historic Building to Society.

GENEVA, June 12.—The American Red Cross has taken over the Palais Eynard, one of the historical and most beautiful buildings in Geneva, which has been loaned to them by the local authorities.

A local committee of Americans here will aid all sick and wounded allied soldiers and Swiss citizens, and later American officers and soldiers, being repatriated, will be cared for.

PARIS, June 11.—In its report for May the Military Affairs Department of the American Red Cross says that "no call which has been made upon us nor any need which has come to our attention has been neglected."

Two new Red Cross hospitals were opened on May 30. One, known as No. 5, had 200 patients on May 30. It is now running to its capacity of 600. The other has 350 beds and all Americans in a certain sector will pass through it on the way to American base hospitals, thus being constantly under the attention of the American medical personnel.

American nurses with French-speaking American girls have been placed in every hospital where American wounded are being attended. The number of such hospitals is more than twenty.

DUTCH LINER HERE; PLAN CLOSE SEARCH

BRINGS IN 612 PASSENGERS

The Holland-America liner Nieuwe Amsterdam arrived yesterday from Rotterdam direct, without calling at Halifax, and anchored in the North River at 2:20 o'clock in the afternoon for inspection by the American and British Naval and Military Intelligence Departments. She is expected to land her 612 passengers early today. There are 358 first, 228 second, and 26 third class passengers, the majority of them Dutch people on their way out, via the Pacific, to Java and Borneo, the agents of the line said.

The Nieuwe Amsterdam, which is commander by Captain van den Heuvel, was delayed several days in Rotterdam waiting for the German Government to issue a safe conduct through the danger zone in the North Sea, which was finally granted. One condition insisted upon by Germany was that no passenger belonging to America or any other nations of the Entente Allies should be carried. This was strictly obeyed, it was said, and none will be taken from this side. Only persons from neutral countries will be able to book on the return trip.

On her way out through the North Sea the liner was boarded by officers from a German destroyer, who examined the ship's papers and then allowed her to proceed.

In addition to the officers from the American and British Intelligence Departments a squad of 100 inspectors from the Customs Service and fifty agents of the Secret Service and Immigration Bureau boarded the ship yesterday afternoon to put the passengers through a thorough examination to see if there were any German agents among them. They will also look out for Bolshevist agents, it was said, who are said to be in the pay of the Government at Berlin. The cabins, public rooms, and all parts of the ship, including the bunkers, will be searched, as well as the crew's quarters, for any papers that might have been brought over from Germany.

Any passenger who may be suspected of acting as an agent for the enemy will be searched and his skin treated to discover if there is any writing in invisible ink. The British inspectors have been brought here from Halifax, where they have had long experience in searching Dutch and Scandinavian steamships. It was said late yesterday that this was only the preliminary examination and that the passengers would undergo another questioning before they land today. The suspects will be detained on board the liner, it was said. When the Nieuwe Amsterdam was here last March a number of the passengers were kept on board for days.

Explain Hudson River Fare Rise.

According to officials of the Hudson River Day Line, the recent increase of fares on the line was made by the Railroad Administration, which thought it necessary to increase the boat fares on the Hudson in order that they should be more on a parity with the increased railroad fares, and was not made at the request of the company. Officials of the line said yesterday that they had been in Washington endeavoring to have the fares kept more or less as they had been in the past.

GARFIELD IS FIRM IN MOTOR CAR CUT

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—An announcement tonight by Fuel Administrator Garfield that he would cut down the production of pleasure automobiles to 25 per cent. of normal during the season of 1918-1919 by curtailing the coal supply of that industry, despite any action that the War Industries Board might recommend, was accepted here as a pretty good indication of the attitude which the Fuel Administration would take in regard to many of the so-called less essential manufactories.

The Garfield statement was put out after the conference at the White House. While it did not make any mention of the report that a thorough-going curtailment was discussed there, it gave rise to rumors that the Garfield program, at least so far as automobiles were concerned, had met with opposition on the part of some other officials, and that he was determined to go ahead.

Dr. Garfield's statement said:

"The enormous increase in the demand for coal in connection with the war has convinced the Fuel Administrator that it would be jeopardizing the vital interests of the country to permit fuel to be used in the manufacture of a larger number of pleasure automobiles than the 25 per cent. mentioned above.

"This curtailment does not affect the manufacture of trucks or other cars for war use, nor the enormous amount of other war material which the automobile companies have already undertaken for the Government."

It is understood that the Fuel Administration is proceeding with its plans to curtail the fuel supply of other industries.

FOR GERMAN DEMOCRACY.

Representatives of Twenty Societies Adopt Loyalty Resolution.

Representatives of twenty German-American societies at a meeting held by the Friends of German Democracy in the Liederkranz Hall, 111 East Fifty-eighth Street, last night unanimously adopted the Franz Sigel loyalty resolution, which was sidetracked for "rewording" at a meeting held last week.

The motion to adopt the resolution supporting the President and denouncing Prussian autocracy was seconded by Dr. Julius Jaeger, pastor of the German Reformed Church, East Sixty-eighth Street, who had led the opposition at the first meeting.

In addition to putting through the resolution, Dr. Jaeger emphatically announced his loyalty, and said he was "an American first, last, and forever." He also offered a prayer for the President and for American victory.

Franz Sigel replied to Mrs. Oliver Cromwell Field, who, in a statement issued by the American Defense Society, said "the best German-American is a dead German-American." Mr. Sigel referred Mrs. Field to the casualty list published this morning, which begins and ends with names suggesting Germanic origin. He also said that Marshal McCarthy had promised protection to any German who followed the Marshal's suggestion to march in the Fourth of July loyalty parade; and added that the Friends of German Democracy had received assurances from the Committee on Public Information that any attempt by Mrs. Field to prevent Germans from participating in the parade "would receive the prompt attention of the competent Federal officials."

West Point Graduates See Play.

YOUR BOY'S FUTURE
What the McBurney School Offers

WHAT greater gift in uncertain war times than a thorough education? Whatever the war may bring to your boy in later years, one thing is sure—no readjustments or upheavals can take his education from him. Give your boy this "good gift." Comforts and luxuries must give way to realities. Send your boy to the McBurney School. Place him under men teachers, under the best of influences.

McBurney is tuned to the times. It lays particular emphasis on a strong educational, physical and moral development with the one object of fitting a boy for leadership and a definite career.

McBurney is a distinctive school, and it aims to have one teacher for every ten boys, so that they may have individual guidance in their preparation for college and life.

McBurney conducts a nine weeks' camp school at Camp Greenkill, near Kingston, extending from June 29th to August 31st. Tent life for the boys with all outdoor sports. Tutoring if desired. Close supervision by college men.

We offer a Summer afternoon and evening school beginning July 1st for boys who would like to learn while they earn, including all high school subjects and work of the upper grades of the elementary school.

Fill out and mail the coupon NOW to 318 West 57th St., corner 8th Avenue, New York City.

Send for catalogs and folders now or, better yet, call. We shall be glad to arrange for an interview with our principal or send one of our teachers to you, if that is more convenient. You can have a pass to any of our classes or the entire school. Mark with an X the course you are interested in. No obligation to you.
